Spartans Ready for Fightin' Irish

3 Game Streak
On Line

Coaches Predict Tough Game

Riding a three-game winning streak over the Fightin' Irish from South Bend, the Spartan football team will retain for Notre Dame today if it can keep it four straight.

If the Spartans succeed, they would be the first team since 1930 to win four straight games over the Fighting Irish. While the streak may be in its infancy, it has already listed a number of interested onlookers at the game.

Also at stake will be the Michigan State undefeated record in the Old Yeller Bowl since 1926. Originally scheduled for that year, the award has been extended through the years. The trophy is to be presented today.

Both teams have won numerous games in the last few years, with Notre Dame having a few lead by a few points or touchdowns, and Michigan State having a few lead by a few points or touchdowns. The game is expected to be a close one, with both teams pushing their best.

Weather conditions for the game are expected to be sunny, with a high of 70 degrees and a low of 50. The humidity is expected to be around 60%, with a windspeed of 10 MPH. There will be no rain.

Long range forecasts show a probable continuation of 15-18 miles per hour for the next 72 hours.

Christmas City Change May Bring Cooperation

"Well, Virginia, there might be a Christmas City!"

But plans are up in the air. Student leaders are discussing possible improvements to the city, and maybe this time there will be cooperation instead of the controversy of the past two weeks.

Numerous reasons have been advanced by both TVY and Pan Hel for their willingness to try to make the city a success. These reasons include, but are not limited to, the fact that the city is in the students' interest, and the fact that it is in the interest of all students to have a city that is functional and enjoyable.

All these reasons are well and good, but still, it looked like another case of "if I was a pitcher I'll take my ball and go home." And, maybe some of the Greeks aren't completely happy with their decision. They certainly jeopardized their often shaky position with East Lansing residents by their objections to the plan.

The city appears to be the agreements among individual participation are a secondary point.

Another issue of contention seems to be the "commercialization" of Christmas. A birthday, especially the birthday of a happy occasion. And, since the early days of the Roman Church, the season has moved a great deal to be felt throughout the Christmas spirit.

In keeping with the spirit of brotherhood and reawakening of the true Christmas spirit, men have always felt the urge to express this inner warmth by decorating their homes, pieces of business and communities.

The principal point of discussion here seems to be disagreement between a large concentration of effort and numerous individual attempts on the part of local merchants to portray this Christmas spirit.

The merchants have received the argument for their part. It is not the job and responsibility of each student to make sure the college does not fall down on its share. In the light of this responsibility, why can't the merchants forget their petty selfish ideas and take part with a true Christmas spirit? Can't they go out and prove to the people of East Lansing, the state of Michigan and most of all, themselves, that they know what Christmas means?

Christmas City Change

Proposes New Short Display Statement Issued by Hurst

This is the statement of the student government issued Thursday night:

Christmas City resulted from ideas brought up in a Student Government Executive Board meeting held last Wednesday night after the destruction of several East Lansing Christmas lights.

Student government then contacted the East Lansing Merchants' Association in regard to setting up some sort of Christmas display.

On June 14, a meeting was held by the student government with members of the Merchants' Association in regard to setting up some sort of Christmas display.

The individual bright units had not been contacted regarding the displays except for an article in the State News.

When word opened this term, the student government set up working plans for the displays. Three plans were announced in the State News, and from that time on, a general misunderstanding of the ideas behind and the purpose of Christmas City grew. This situation developed because of our failure to enroll with the individual living units on the organizational plans.

If I had had any idea that a program centered around the theme and meaning of Christmas would result in the fluster that it has, I would have asked that all student plans be scrapped from the beginning.

The members of the Student Government Executive Board and myself are in complete agreement that the principle (the mutual cooperation between the students and the city in laying the groundwork) and the separate relations between the two groups behind Christmas City is needed.

I think that if there had been better communication between the government and the merchants, the city could have been straightened out and a Christmas display developed without confusion. Consequently an improved present plan and start snow. The first meeting to formulate these plans will be held today.

Notre Dame Ticket Plan Criticized

To the Editor:

Add another to the list of disasters that have hit the students.

This past week, along with other simulated disasters I have had to endure in my career, was the failure of the Notre Dame tickets. The University of Notre Dame, in cooperation with the University of Michigan, arranged to sell Notre Dame tickets at the University of Michigan student union last Tuesday, no one was able to buy any ticket to this event. I learned that I was not among the select few to have purchased tickets. I planned for and was told that there were tickets available. I sat the other 20 minutes waiting for my tickets to be delivered. As the other group was sold out, I was informed that the tickets sold out.

The student ticket plan is to be supported, but it seems that the plans have been poorly organized. The ticket plan is being handled by the University of Michigan, and the student government is only being informed. I would appreciate it if you would continue to cover this subject.

This week, the Christmas City Change was proposed. The student government is considering various plans for a Christmas display. Notre Dame Out to End State's String

By Chuck Miller

The Irish are a proud bunch. They lead the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame in the crucible of competition straight through to the Sugar Bowl, and Notre Dame has proved that they are not to be taken lightly. The Green Wave have produced some of the nation's finest football players in recent years, and the Irish have a well deserved reputation for talent. This game is highly anticipated, and both teams are looking to make a statement on the national stage.

The Irish will be led by quarterback Pat McAfee, who is one of the most dynamic players in college football. He has a strong arm and is a dangerous runner, making him a threat to any defense. The Irish also have a strong running game, with fullback Dan Flood and halfback Alex Schaefer providing solid rushing options.

On the other hand, the Spartans have a dominant defense, led by All-American linebacker Johnnie Fugate and safety Paul Bard. They have a stingy defense that allows them to control the game and keep the ball out of their opponents' hands. The Spartans have a potent offense as well, with quarterback Dennis Doyle and running back Ed O'Keefe providing scoring opportunities.

This game is a battle of two of the nation's top teams, and it promises to be a high-scoring affair. Both teams have the talent and experience to come out on top, and the outcome will be determined by which team can execute their game plan better. It is sure to be an exciting game, and fans of both teams will not want to miss it.
