Election Viewpoints Expressed By Young Democrats and GOP

Why should a Republican Congress be elected?

There are a few reasons why a Republican Congress would be beneficial: It would be the end of the "bellbottom era," the era when the national welfare was being taken care of by the government. It would also be the end of the "bureaucracy era," where the government was trying to do too much and was not being held accountable for its actions.

On the other hand, a Democratic Congress would be more effective in controlling the national budget. A Democratic Congress would also be more likely to support programs that benefit the average American, such as Social Security and Medicare.

This viewpoint is more appealing to the young generation, who are more interested in personal freedom and less concerned with the national debt. The young generation is more likely to support a Republican Congress, which would allow them to make their own decisions and have more freedom. However, a Democratic Congress would be more appealing to the older generation, who are more concerned with the national debt and the budget.

About Cheering and the Block

Philip H. Hume, Macao, Ohio

To the Editor:

I would like to clear up a few misconceptions about the Block's performance.

First of all, there is no "rubber-stamp". The Block does not always vote with the majority. The Block is not a "rubber-stamp". The Block is made up of individuals who have their own opinions and who vote based on those opinions.

Secondly, the Block does not always have the majority. There are times when the Block is in the minority. The Block does not always have the majority. There are times when the Block is in the minority.

Lastly, the Block is not a "rubber-stamp". The Block does not always vote with the majority. The Block is made up of individuals who have their own opinions and who vote based on those opinions.

The Block is an integral part of the student government and should be respected for its role in the decision-making process. It is a mistake to see the Block as a "rubber-stamp". The Block is not a "rubber-stamp". The Block is made up of individuals who have their own opinions and who vote based on those opinions.
