Coeds Open Campaigns For UMCO Candidates

On a campus known for its beautiful women, one where open contests are as common as mid-term tests, a contest for a king receives a lot of attention.

"UMCO" sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, is a race whereby the "ugliest man" on campus becomes COO's king.

This annual contest will begin today.

Women's living units sponsor candidates and the title is determined through a voting system in which each vote costs the voter a penny.

The penny collected, except for 10 percent for APA, is turned over to the Campus Chest Fund.

Campus Chest, sponsor of MSC's big charity drive each year, is the agent which turns over the students' contributions to various charitable organizations.

Here is no longer an opportunity to help some "ugly man" become a king, but a chance to add to the Campus Chest Fund.

Training has many facets in a big firm like Du Pont, Dress, and a great deal of thought has been given to how to make it effective. We have been training it as an important part of a man's career. We think that the best way to train an officer in a company is to give him a minimum of the job responsibility in a maximum limited time. That is the general practice today at Du Pont, Dress.

Of course, each department varies the general policy to suit its own needs. A new man being trained for production must be given a broad understanding of the work and the various departments he will have to work with. He must also get some idea of the various operations from the shop and the laboratory. The training must be continued from the start, no matter how long it takes. Each man is given a special assignment and trained in the various operations. Such a man then has a chance to learn the work he will have to do. As Du Pont has a large and varied staff, it is necessary to provide for the training of all employees. To do this, the company has established a training program for new employees. The prime objective of Du Pont training is always to train men to do the job right and to do it efficiently.
Amid 'Pomp and Circumstance'

Celebration Has Lighter Side

Michigan State was 180 years old Saturday, and the birthday celebration was impressive, traditional, pompous and, above all, festive. The festivities were the high point of a week-long celebration which ended on Saturday with the annual commencement exercises.

Dr. Herman Winstrom, president of the University, and Dr. Gerber, president of the Alumni Association, were both prominent in the ceremonies. Dr. Winstrom, who is also the chancellor of the University, spoke at the commencement exercises and was also present at the banquet and other events throughout the week.

Dr. Gerber, who is also the president of the Alumni Association, was present at the commencement exercises and was also present at the banquet and other events throughout the week.

The week-long celebration included a series of events, including a pageant, a parade, a picnic, and a concert. The pageant was held on Thursday evening and featured a procession of students, faculty, and alumni dressed in costumes from different eras in the history of Michigan State University.

The parade was held on Friday morning and featured floats, bands, and cheerleaders. The picnic was held on Saturday afternoon and featured food, games, and music. The concert was held on Saturday evening and featured a variety of musical performances, including a performance by the Michigan State University choir.

The climax of the week-long celebration was the commencement exercises, which were held on Saturday afternoon. The exercises were attended by thousands of students, faculty, and alumni, who were all dressed in their finest attire. The exercises were highlighted by the presentation of diplomas to the graduates, and by the speeches of Dr. Winstrom and Dr. Gerber.

The exercises were followed by a banquet, attended by the graduates and their families, and by the Alumni Association. The banquet was held in the Alumni Hall, and featured a three-course meal, speeches, and entertainment.

The week-long celebration was a fitting tribute to the 180-year history of Michigan State University, and a fitting farewell to the graduating class of 2018.
