Discrimination Dilemma

Angeli Action Muddled

Having successfully disposed of a storm of criticism aimed at its weakness, the Angeli "anti-discrimination" ordinance is still on the state's legislative agenda.

Student Government is, in effect, as strong as the bill it passes. Ironically, a bill passed by the body is powerless unless the students themselves vote it into law.

The coordination clause is the reason all the bills establish a committee to write up a suitable substitute for the ordinance in question and present it to Congress. If this bill goes out of the original bill, the entire coordination clause is the reason, the legislation is on the state's agenda. Although admitting that the ordinance contains several serious flaws, backers hold that half a loaf is better than none. Striks the entire concept of coordination, they say, and no bill will get the idea that MSC students are in favor of discrimination.

While we can understand their fears, we think they're a bit too vague to be fully-formed. By leaving the Angeli ordinance intact, Congress has shown it is more interested in what people will think of the practicality or constitutionality of its action. A short reading of the Angeli ordinance would be enough to convince everyone that some drastic changes are in order.

First, it requires all campus living units to remove discriminatory clauses from their charters by October 15. While it's a step in the right direction, it is not clear that this directive will be effective in removing the discriminatory clauses.

Second, the bill is not clear on what it means by "students' interest." Most of the students' exclusions are based on personal characteristics like race, religion, or gender. The bill is silent on the issue.

Probably the most important fault of the ordinance was summed up by Hurst when he said, "You can't legislate better standards if you have no clear idea of what you want to accomplish." We can congratulate Congress for one thing—they defied an amendment to the "report" bill that would have substituted the word "separately" for "integration" wherever it appeared in the bill.

A book or any other name would smell as sweet, as the saying goes. A smooth-running upheaval won't correct the ugly facts of discrimination, an evil which can be controlled only by education and not by the well-meaning legislation in the world.

5 Frosh Win Again, 71-38

6 TM Block Titles Decided

By JOHN LOPURINO
Continuing its longstanding tradition, the Michigan State University women's basketball team won six titles in the NCAA Tournament.

The victory marked the Frosh's third consecutive season with at least six titles. It was also the largest margin of victory in the past five years.

John Doherty, a senior guard, scored 25 points in just 12 minutes of play. He was named Most Valuable Player of the Tournament.

Doherty had scored only 10 points in the previous two games, but he stepped up big time this time around.

The Frosh took control early and never looked back, outscoring the opposition 35-17 in the first half. They kept their momentum going in the second half, outscoring the opposition 36-21.

Doherty made 5 of 7 field goals, 2 of 2 free throws, and 1 of 1 three-point attempt. He also had 6 rebounds and 5 assists.

Other key contributors included: Jana McCarty, who scored 14 points; Jody McCarty, who had 13 points; and Sue McCarty, who contributed 12 points.

The win solidified the Frosh's status as one of the top teams in the nation. They are now 26-6 overall and 10-0 in the Big Ten.

The Frosh will now turn their attention to the Big Ten Tournament, which begins next week. They are favored to win the championship and earn an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

They will face a tough test in the first round, as they take on a team that is 24-8 overall and 12-6 in the Big Ten. However, the Frosh have dominated their opponents this season and are confident they can advance to the second round.

How do you think the Frosh will do in the Big Ten Tournament? Let us know your thoughts in the comments section below!

What people are doing at General Electric

Young specialist in community relations makes friends in 101 plant cities

General Electric now has 111 plants in 101 cities, and one person is common to every community that it is a good neighbor.

This responsibility is shared in some small measure and emphasized by 12-year-old John J. McCarty. His job: Contact Program Service in Plant Community Relations.

McCarty's work is not routine; neither is his assignment. It is to help each of the General Electric plants tell their neighbors what it is doing, what it hopes to do, and how it fits into the community.

He must ready to travel to 26 states.

He prepares community relations materials for use in all 101 plant cities. He maintains surveys of community sentiment, and tests the local effects of the company's advertising.

He helps plant management achieve community contacts with civic, religious, educational and other community leaders.

101 College graduates at General Electric

This is a sensitive and important job. McCarty is featured in it as a careful, steady-going program of development. Like McCarty, each of the 230 college graduate employees is given his chance to grow, to learn the job he does, and to realize his full potential.

For General Electric has long believed this; when he young minds are given chance to take full flight, a new era of success is possible - the individual, the company, and the country.

Bryan Hall's "Five Aces" take the place of the Bryan College debate team in the forums this week.

But every Sunday afternoon, from 3 to 4 o'clock, when the sun is down and the air is fresh, there is another group of the Five Aces at the Bryan College debating team who will give you one of the finest programs you'll ever hear.

One of the highlights of their program is the "Music Displaces TV" segment, where they play songs and perform skits that are both funny and educational. It's a great way to spend an afternoon and a great way to support local talent.

So, if you're in the area on Sunday afternoon, be sure to stop by and enjoy the performance of the Bryan College debate team's "Five Aces."
