Resolution Adopted

BROOK, Germany - The West German Bundestag ratified national possession of a crippled United Nation's body that took place in the Saar area

The Bundestag has adopted a resolution to move the United Nations Security Council to the Saar area in 1955. The Saar area, which includes the Saar River, coal mines, and Saarburg, was occupied by the United States in 1945. The United Nations Security Council is planning to move the United Nations Security Council to the Saar area in 1955. The resolution was adopted by a narrow margin in a vote of 20-19 in which the United States voted against the resolution. The United States has opposed the resolution on the grounds that it would disrupt the Saar's relationship with other European countries. The resolution has been criticized by some European countries who have warned of the potential for disruption of the Saar's economic and political relationships. The United States has cautioned that any attempt to move the United Nations Security Council to the Saar area would be considered a threat to the Saar's sovereignty and territorial integrity. The United States has suggested that the Saar's relationship with other European countries be strengthened through economic and political cooperation. The Saar's relationship with other European countries has been a source of friction in recent years, with the Saar's decision to join the Common Market for Economic Cooperation and Development. The Saar's decision to join the Common Market has been opposed by some European countries who have warned of the potential for disruption of the Saar's economic and political relationships.
Graduation Should End Studies

Caps, Gowns and Exams Just Don’t Go Together

On March 17, for the first time in MSC's history, winter term graduates will receive their diplomas attired in caps and gowns.

They’ll be pleased to note that because this is Centennial year, and President Bancroft instructed, previously, only those seniors graduating in the spring wore caps and gowns.

The whole idea behind this request is good, in fact, it should be carried further to require all future winter and fall term graduates to wear caps and gowns.

Their Commencement exercises have always been extremely simple. They’ve marched into the and dined in Academic clothes and heard the old story that it is the policy of 50% to save of the ceremonies attached to graduation for the spring term Commencement. Then they get their diplomas, along with an invite to make it last, and take part in the impressive spring exercises.

It’s about time for a change. Those scenes, unfortunately enough to complete their educations when the weather isn’t any older, deserve every bit as much consideration as do the spring term graduates. Most of them probably never again see the sun in a college. The very least they should receive is an award for four years work in a graduation ceremony they can remember.
