VHF Is the Answer

Can't Play to Empty House

The battle rages on over the request for a VHF channel for WEAR-AM, but one point can't be denied: Whether or not President Eisenhower said it, WEAR-AM would have to close VHF if the request is granted. The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) ruled in March that the station's request to operate on VHF is denied.

The FCC's decision leaves WEAR-AM with only one choice: to close. The station has been in operation for 23 years and has been a part of the community for that length of time. The station's owners have fought hard to keep the station on the air, but the FCC's decision is final.

The FCC ruled that WEAR-AM's request to operate on VHF is denied because the station has not shown that it would be able to maintain a viable audience. The FCC also ruled that the station's request to operate on VHF would cause interference to other stations in the area.

The station's owners have appealed the decision to the Federal Communications Commission. They hope that the commission will reverse the decision and allow the station to operate on VHF.

The station's owners have also been working to raise funds to keep the station on the air. They have been contacted by several local businesses and organizations, and they are hopeful that they will be able to raise the necessary funds.

The station's owners have said that they are committed to keeping the station on the air and that they will continue to fight for the right to operate on VHF.

STUN Improving

Student Book Sales Still A Problem

The problem of student book sales has not been solved. This is particularly evident in the case of STUN (Student Textbook Union), which moved its headquarters from the Union to the Student Center last year. The new arrangement is not proving popular. Quotations $10,000 is less than $10,000 in previous years.

Some students are concerned that the new arrangement will make it more difficult for them to access the textbooks they need. They are also concerned that the new arrangement will make it more difficult for them to communicate with the STUN staff.

The STUN staff is aware of these concerns and is working to address them. They are also working to improve the new arrangement.
