Red China’s Entry to UN Debated in Panel Session

Conflicting Views Given by Delegates
Communist Charged With Lack of ‘Desire for Peace’

By JERRY HENNINGS, Associate Editor

The pros and cons of admitting Communist China to the United Nations were debated by representatives from 15 member countries Wednesday night in the Auditorium.

Communist China was admitted to the United Nations Thursday afternoon, after 93 votes were cast by the General Assembly. The United States was one of 41 countries that approved the resolution to allow China into the UN, but 51 countries voted against the resolution.
A Look at Our Neighbors

United Nations Program - A Great Experience

The Yugoslavian ambassador to the United Nations summed up UN Day Wednesday at Michigan State better than any other single comment.

His Excellency Dr. M. Jevtic said that the evening session of the UN Day program was more like "an actual meeting of the Security Council than just a panel in a university in the state of Michigan."

United Nations Day on campus Wednesday became one of the most distinguished programs of Michigan State's Centennial year.

There are many students who deserve a great deal of commendation for participating in this controversial and imaginative look into the work of the United Nations. This is the year Michigan State's Centennial effort of the year leaves a good mark on the reputation of an especially good job.

Michigan State is grateful for the opportunity of meeting with distinguished delegates from 14 countries, and for the chance of participating in the hyper-controversial subject of admitting Red China into the United Nations.

The evening session climaxed a day of great opportunity for students to hear the personal views of their neighbors on a subject of international controversy.

The seven-point program of His Excellency C. L. Staples, ambassador from Liberia, the statements of Consul V. D. Capron from the Philippines, and the discussion by the Excellency Lee Ramee summed up the general opinion of the panel as favoring admitting Red China into the UN.

It was stressed, however, that all the delegates spoke from a personal opinion, and not as spokesmen for the policy of their countries on this subject.

The diplomatic emphasized that the United Nations charter specifies that membership is open to all peace-loving states that respect the charter and accept its obligations. The panel agreed that Communist China could not be admitted into the United Nations unless it stops its armament tactics and begins to accept its international obligations.

Several specific cases cited Communist China's intervention in Korea, its refusal to return UN prisoners, and its continuous aggression of offers to talk with the UN about peace, as examples of why Communist China is not living up to the UN charters or qualifications for membership.

Another controversial point was introduced by the Yugoslavian ambassador, who said the United Nations must decide whether a government of China to recognize, the nationalistic or the Communist. "If we would have to accept Nationalist China before, we could talk of admitting Red China," he said, because only one government of a people can be recognized.

The debate was honest and candid, and provided an excellent insight into the workings of the UN.

The real credit for a great Centennial program goes to only a handful of students. The best measure of congratulations is the knowledge that the Michigan State students spent in the United Nations program is an education in which everyone may take pride.

Frosh Car Ban: Still Too Arbitrary

Student government may be credited with the present position on the Frosh car ban. The Student Senate recommends that the ban be put on the books and that the car be restricted to a thousand days off campus.

The rule, if adopted, would affect present and future Frosh, but should be approved only as a last resort.

Michigan State students have only half-hour use of a special Wilson's carooment. A blanket ban may be kept out of student's hands. A restriction on Froshmen driving can be supported, and not belittled, as a prerequisite for that same Froshmen, free cars.

Part of the student government movement is to prevent the fountain ban is that if new students were eligible for driving licenses it would eliminate the inconvenience of having to drive home weekends. This practice of having home as primary residence is said to be a stumbling block in helping the new student adjust to college life.

However, the government officials insist that students are able to maintain a two-week grade average. It is a much more plausible standard for weeding out drivers than an arbitrary ban.

The recommended restriction in the Frosh car-permit is to students who failed to maintain a two-week grade average. It is a much more practical standard for weeding out drivers than an arbitary ban.

Below are the names of students with cars on campus more often, or are more poorly "qualified," the "better the average string" expectation for drivers who fail an adequate basis for keeping drivers out of the cars.

The usual practice is that if the Frosh car-permit is to drivers who fail to maintain a two-week grade average. It is a much more practical standard for weeding out drivers than an arbitrary ban.

Eddie Mathews, long-hitting third of the Milwaukee Breve, was hospitalised Wednesday after suffering a case of acute appendicitis.

Club officials said the 29-year-old right fielder had surgery for the condition, called for by California's Dr. T. K. Johnson at Milwaukee's Medical College Hospital. A Saturday operation left Mathews in a critical condition, with doctors not knowing if he would ever play baseball again.

Mathews, who set a National League record by hitting 56 home runs last season, had surgery performed on the stump of his right appendix. The doctors say the operation was successful, but they have not yet announced when he will return to baseball action.

Boxer Claims 'Black Out' in King

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Boxer Harold Johnson said Wednesday he remembers entering the ring on the night of May 6 to fight Julie in a nationally televised fight—-a contest described as "if the fights of a lifetime!" But Johnson said he was thrown out as he attempted to take second on the throw to third and Morril bunted out, third to first, to end the Hurley.

Manager Marty Marion argued a double play, but Hurley, however, maintained Bauer was guilty of interference before Fox fielded the ball. Manager Marion struck out Hurley but Jim Cusack reached first on a Texas Leaguer to left.

Jock Sutherland headed to first and 2B Lewis came in to steal second, only to be thrown out by Harry Kinney. Mickey Martin fanned for the third out.

State used four pitchers, with the reserve going to Mike Keppe, who came in to relieve Brad Bell, 2B to the semi-final, with Mathews on first. T. K. Johnson said Mathews will return to baseball action.
