Antique Surrey Stages A Comeback on Campus

By Pat Smith

An invitation to ride in a authentic 18th century carriage is being extended to Spartan students this week.

The Carriage Company, a group of students interested in transportation of the period, will offer rides around campus in a reproduction of one of the carriages used in the time of George III.

The carriage, a four-seater, will be located in front of the Administration Building. The carriage, which cost about $400, is made entirely of wood and has a high, curved roof.

The carriage is being driven by early 19th century students, including those who have studied at the University of Chicago and the University of California.

The Carriage Company plans to offer rides to students and faculty members on a regular basis. The carriage is available for use by anyone who wishes to experience a ride in a period vehicle.

Student Affairs In India Cited

To the Editor:

The recent letter to the editor by V K. Chaturvedi on student affairs in India should be exhaustively discussed in our student community. It is a matter of concern how student affairs are carried out in India and how they contrast with those in this country.

The author has touched upon some aspects which are quite relevant and agreeable to us. However, there is a need to integrate these ideas with the realities of our country. The idea is to enhance the value of our education and make it more relevant to the current scenario.

With regards,

DubNIN—It’s Been...

BY DONN SKELETON— Associate Press

Tom end time and for a leap shift as she DubNIN leaves the confines of the sports page and is featured out to the city page. No, this isn’t a goody, merely a “see you later, only in a different place.”

Well, wait.

One conclusion about having Page Five is that I won’t have to defend my major league baseball predictions. As I leave, the New York Yankees and the fantastic stick from Brooklyn are drawing farther and farther away from all “redneck,” series, and this just makes it tougher on Jack Berry, who also saw the Tribe and Braves in the series. He’s going to be around at the final reckoning.

Woo.

Can’t say it hasn’t been fun this ten-term tenure as sports editor. Looking back, I recall a part series about the football team that really made my life a ball for a few days. Didn’t know that many people lived around here, let alone read the paper.

And I am sure it wasn’t really as hot as it fell in the ice area this way the night the baseball team battled Michigan—-and a “Jingo”— of mine.

And the tennis team is still mutilating about playing each other games and Dickie Monticelli is pitted with a 2 and not a 4. And who could possibly be as happy as the baseball team was, traveling back from Michigan after qualifying on the Wolverines, 5-2, at Ann Arbor.

Anyhow, the time to move over in the other corner of the city room and turn over the Luther Ausfeld chair to Jack Berry.

Woo, there.

But, before you (or didn’t you think you were going to get off that easy, did you?) I want to tell you the story behind Bob Powell’s White Sox contract.

Its source are scattered but they will all agree on the basic ingredients. Seems that Bob was in the outfield at the first and was looking for perfect throws in the three basemen, who called him in to take a turn at bat.

Ron Jackson, St. Louis center fielder, and Bob Powell, center fielder from Michigan, chatted a long time run over the 85-foot mark at Comiskey Park and Frank Lane, Chicago general manager, was all smiles.

Powell dropped into the batting cage and hit a couple of line shots into the outfield—just to warm up.

Then he blasted over the 415-foot mark and Lane, who had staked out the box at Powell, dropped down a couple of more in the series and Jackson was moving over to make room on the White Sox bench.
