LUCK lifted them. He placed the large plows at Anderson, where he had been in the neighborhood for some time. It was a challenge to the community, and the local farmers were eager to try them out. Several farmers, including James, who had been working on his farm since he was a boy, were excited about the new technology. They believed it would help them increase their productivity and efficiency.

The state farm college office released information that showed the benefits of using the new type of equipment. The farmers were particularly interested in the economic advantages, such as reduced labor costs and increased crop yields. The state farm college representatives were available to answer questions and provide guidance to those who were interested in adopting the new technology.

In the early years of the 20th century, the plow industry was experiencing significant growth and innovation. The use of cast iron and steel in plow manufacturing was becoming more common, and the design of plows was becoming more sophisticated. The adoption of the new technology was part of a larger trend in agricultural development, where farmers were increasingly using machinery and equipment to increase their efficiency and productivity.

Spectacular Show Sets 1:30 Start

Red Barn Feeds
To Get Preview

With the setting of the ribbon on the Red Barn Farm Lane on Monday at 1:30, Michigan's Centennial of Farm Mechanization, the most spectacular and largest of the kind ever held, will officially open. The ribbon-cutting ceremony will be presented by a Chamber of Commerce convention. About 3,000 persons are attending.

The new farm equipment, which is now on exhibition in Lansing, will be open to the public starting today. They will be on display in the main barn, which will be opened on Tuesday at 1:30. The million-dollar equipment show will officially open on Wednesday. The display will feature 300 exhibits, which are arranged in a 20-foot-wide, 100-foot-long building.

2,000 to Attend 46th Annual Show

Another view of the accomplishments of the 4-H Michigan youth are on parade at Michigan State Fair. Photo shows the stands of the 46th annual Show of 4-H Club members at Michigan's 4-H Club Center. More than 2,000 boys and girls, from every county in the state, will participate in this year's competition.

The one-day competitive event will result in 4-H winning awards of $280,000. In addition, state 4-H winners will take part in the state fair.

The 1955 4-H individual exhibits will be shown by members in the categories of agriculture, veterinary science, home economics, and the judging services.

AMERICAN TRADE

In answer to a question from the audience about the effect of wage increases on the prices of products, Mendel replied that the prices of a product "are not, at all times, affected by wage increases."

Cassel added, with emphasis, that wage increases that are too high can cause an increase in manufactured goods and produce a "shock wave" effect.

Toms recalled that in 1944 the U.S. government used the techniques developed with General Motors, maintaining that the same organization should have a way to control wage increases.
For years and years, Chevrolet has given you those qualities of materials and workmanship that make it the best investment in its field. Judy Bradley, Miss Michigan State, is seemingly holding up this tractor on her shoulder. However, the pretty MSI student is just brightening up the picture. The tractor will evolve so that Farm Mechanization visitors can see better its working parts.

In rehearsal for the Centennial pageant (June of the end), a scene is being directed. The show, to be shown twice daily except Saturday, depicts the life of a typical farm family through four generations. The performances will be held in a special, 4,000-seat arena on Farm Lane Rd, and are free to the public.

Planning

Several Centennial programs are under the supervision of Ernest Kuykendall who is also in charge of the camp water recreation. Planning for the shows was done prior to the dedication of the All-American Carrier.

The new carrier, U.S.S. Forrestal, with its natural flight deck, seems to dwarf this port at Newport News, Va., as it nears completion. The new carrier is called the world's largest warship, and it will be a feat of engineering. At this point the flight deck is 225 feet wide. Builder's son trials will be held 16-17.

The high-speed look, monstrously weightless and narrow, seems too large to recognize in size, as the island superstructure, the main control tower, comes into view. At this point the flight deck seems to dwarf this ship. Builder's son trials will be held 16-17.

Part of the All-American and International Carrier display is seen here along the seawall of Fort Rd. Exhibitors from both the United States and Canada are displaying their products. One exhibitor has sent 14 tractors.
