Animals on Display Aren't Fossils

Museum Features Life-Like Replicas

By SHARRIE SCHNEIDER

Many people are unaware of what goes on in a museum. They think there are just a bunch of old fossils collecting old fossils for display. But this is a fallacy. Much interesting work is carried on there.

One false notion is that the animals on display are stuffed. Actually most of them aren't. At the present time an antelope is being prepared for the natural habitat display in the new museum. These displays are reproductions of the natural surroundings of various animal and plant life, with curved paintings acting as backgrounds and artificial resemblances of vegetation in the foreground. The reproduced animal is the center of attraction.

Hope is now completing the first specimen. Of course, the primary step in preparing a natural habitat is

Moussorgsky's 'Pictures' Thrills

Pianist Romans Shows His Technical Fluency

By LYNN SHEPARD

MSU pianist Anthony "Tony" Romans played his classics and played them well, but it was his intuitive mastery over Moussorgsky's half-hour-plus "Pictures at an Exposition" which thrilled Tuesday night's Music Aud spectators.

Tall Tony, a graduate of Syracuse University who is fulfilling requirements for his Master's Degree in Music, has that knack of getting the most out of his piano with a minimum of noticeable physical effort.

Romans showed great technical fluency throughout the concert, and this, with his showy interpretive styling, made his Scialotti "Sonata A major," Bach "Fantasia, C minor" and Beethoven "Sonata E major, Opus 109" outstanding.

As mentioned before, though, it was the Moussorgsky work which took the top billing. "Pictures at an Exposition" is a 11 movement or, if you will, 11 stage enactment of the Russian impressionist's imagination.

It was in the "Exposition" billing approximately half the concert, that Romans' dazzling technical display really came into full view. This often bombastic, at times even desecrating, selection particularly exhibited Romans' use of arm weight.

The illusion which Moussorgsky seeks to convey is that of an art gallery visitor strolling from one painting to another. Every time he strolls, the musical expression is that of the "Promenade" in variation.

Following the first "Promenade," the first pointing is of "The Gnome," an impulsive arrangement written, for the most part, in a minor key. "The See PIANIST, Page 3.

Addresses Israeli Parliament

Defends Decision To Retire Troops

JERUSALEM (AP)—Under taunts and badgering at an uproarious session Tuesday night, Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion asked Parliament to support his decision to pull Israeli troops out of Egypt and Gaza.

BULLETIN

To Halt Aggression

WASHINGTON, AP—The Senate adopted overwhelming Tuesday night a resolution serving notice on Russia, the United States will fight, if necessary, to help halt aggression in the Middle East.

The vote was 73-19. Israeli Parliament. It took the speaker five minutes to reduce order.

Ben-Gurion declared the aim of the October invasion was deliverance of Israel from danger of Arab attack, not conquest. He implied that goal was achieved.

"I am keenly aware of the dangers and drawbacks involved in the settlement we have made," he told Parliament.

While Israel did not receive the UN guarantee of security against Arab attack that were demanded, Ben-Gurion said.

"The President of the United States has assumed a moral responsibility toward Israel and many other nations have made statements which involve a moral commitment."

With these assurances of support for maintaining peace in the Middle East, Ben-Gurion said, "I do not hesitate to advise the members of the Knesset (Parliament) and the people of Israel to accept this settlement."

The white-haired old warrior was tired to the point of exhaustion as he faced up to bitterness and sarcasm shouted at his entrance.

Today he faces the opposition's motion of no-confidence, and he is expected to win out.

Four hours before he spoke, speakers at a mass rally in this old Holy City accused him of surrender and demanded that he resign.

As Ben-Gurion spoke, Israel's army made final preparations to pull out of the Gaza Strip and the Gulf of Aqaba, probably today.

Tabling Election Bill Would Defeat Purpose

The constitutional amendment to establish a system of popular election of the student government president is due out of committee tonight... What happens to that bill tonight may very well serve notice of the possible success of a popular election.

It is more often used to kill a measure through sheer inactivity... In a system as complex as even AUSG, can become, the committee system of investigation is extremely necessary.

An Individual Matter

What is an educated man? Is it a person who has been to college? One who has received one or several advanced degrees? Or is it one with an inquiring mind, regardless of his academic background?

education remains an individual achievement... We cannot help but wonder how many of us are guilty of thinking that on the day when we receive a diploma, we will be "educated."

As chairman of the policy committee this past term, I have been actively interested in the organization and purposes of the AWS Activities Board... There are four areas in which I should especially like to see improvements made.

LOUISE HORNBECK Judiciary

DOROTHY MCQUILLAN Judiciary

To me, AWS is just what its name implies. It is an organization of associated women students... If elected president of AWS Judiciary Board, I would work for better communication between women students and the Board.

South Wins Delay On Civil Rights Action

Legislation Postponed A Week

House to Consider Measure Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP)—Southern Congress members Tuesday won a week's postponement of House action on civil rights legislation. But they made no immediate move to extend senate hearings on the same subject.

Chairman Celler (D-N.Y.) of the House Judiciary Committee said he accepted a southern request to hold off further consideration of the measure until next Tuesday. Celler told newsmen nothing would be gained by talking because "there was no chance of finishing today."

But Rep. Keating of New York, senior committee Republican, said he was "not a party to any such agreement." He termed it "part and parcel of a strategy of delay."

Southern Congress members have sought to extend consideration of the controversial legislation, particularly in the senate where chances of killing the bill by filibuster would be better late in the session.

However, the Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights Tuesday wound up its scheduled hearings on civil rights proposals without receiving any demands for an extension.

Such a request still may be made, though. Sen. Ervin (D-NC) said he is considering asking for more hearings either before the subcommittee or the full Senate Judiciary Committee.

Ervin said "some more good folks" from the south were unable to appear before the hearing windup.

The Senate group heard Mississippi's governor testify that enactment of civil rights legislation would spark "agitation, uproar, tumult and domestic discord."

Gov. James P. Coleman and Sen. Neuberger (D-Ore.) were the last scheduled witnesses. Coleman said he fears the authority which the Attorney General would have under the Eisenhower administration measure to seek federal court injunctions against any civil rights violations.

"Trial by jury and similar constitutional rights are to be discarded" under this procedure, he argued.

Neuberger said, in reply to a question from Ervin, that government by injunction wouldn't disturb him "as much as the denial of basic human rights to thousands of American citizens."

The administration bill would permit the attorney general to seek enforcement of civil rights through court injunctions and civil damage suits, create a commission to investigate civil rights problems and complaints, and set up a civil rights division in the justice department.

Chorus" is dutifully followed by another "Promenade."

"The Old Castle," a slow melodic waltz with a bass untried, especially showed Bennett's effortless fashion and highly individual styling. Another "Promenade" and "Children Quarrelling at Play" kept the piece's tempo up.

The Ox-Cart, a plodding movement, served as one of the best parts of the medley. Its theme was similar in manner to the Don Cossack Chorus' last week rendition of "Volga Boatmen's Song." It had the same "I'm coming, I'm here, I'm going" effect.

Following the campus program, the six will plan to join other midwestern university and college students from Ghana in a big weekend gathering at the Lincoln Hotel in Chicago.

England is giving the west African nation dominion status equal to Canada and Australia. Ghana is the first sovereign Negro nation in the British Commonwealth.

Tooth Decay Predicted Controllable

The prediction that tooth decay will some day be as controllable as typhoid fever, diphtheria and other such diseases was made by Dr. Harrison R. Hunt, member of a three-man team engaged in dental research here.

The program which has been under way for 20 years is sponsored by the U. S. Public Health Service. Other members of the research team are Dr. Carl A. Hoppert, chemist and Dr. Samuel Rosen, bacteriologist.

Experimental results indicate that heredity influences tooth decay in rats and the study is now confining on determining the hereditary conditions which result in tooth decay in humans.

Dr. Hunt would not predict just when it will be possible to prevent tooth decay.

Transport Smashes Into Houses 17 Killed in English Plane Crash

BRAYTON, England, (AP)—A flaming Royal Air Force transport plane smashed into a row of houses Tuesday, killing 15 airmen and two civilians.

Fans of fiery wreckage showered over a field where 47 kindergartners, children were playing, but they escaped injury.

The four-engined Beverley aircraft had taken off in misty weather from Abington airfield, 75 miles northwest of London, for the Mediterranean islands of Malta with 18 RAF men and 9 air force police dogs. Six of the dogs also perished.

A few minutes after leaving the ground, one of the plane's engines spluttered and popped, sending real trouble, the pilot wheeled the big ship around and headed back to base.

As the crippled plane made its final approach, a wing tip hit a tree.

There was a burst of flame and the whole aircraft seemed to catch fire.

There was one hell of a bang," said D. H. Webb, a farmer, "and then the aircraft crashed into a brick building and a house."

Flaming gasoline from the plane's tanks — harmful for the kindergartners — set the houses afire.

College President Raps Sports Spectatorship

CHICAGO (AP)—A college president asserted Tuesday that "spectatorship is perhaps the most degrading influence in our society."

He agreed with Bob Feller, retired major league pitcher, who said recently that spectator sports are ruining the younger generation as far as athletics go.

The new criticism of spectatorship was made by President Edwin B. Burdell of the College Union, a New York City college, in a speech at the national conference of higher education.

Burdell told the following college presidents:

"Adult education must be more than mere time-consuming entertainment but should be in addition a carrier of democratic values, ideals and processes."

The 19th century potato bug slapper, was made in Minnesota. The device slips potato bugs off the vines and throws them into a tray of kerosene where they die.

It is a two-wheeled cart with two projecting sheet metal pans in the front. Between these pans, the potato vines are crowded and at appropriate times, a revolving cylinder with metal vane shape each plant and shakes the bugs into the tray.

According to Lloyd Emmons, assistant director of the museum, the potato bug slapper would probably be as effective today as it was in 1875. However, it has no effect on the eggs remaining on the plants and would have to be used often.

There is no good reason why students should not take classes during the afternoon or evening hours. The nature of individual professors for morning classes, or for classes only three days a week, should not be allowed to determine the size of the plant.

Educators have a responsibility to the public to see fully and economically the plant which they have before they respect addition.
