Collective Bargaining Major Role Kaiser Steel Committee Member Discusses Labor Disputes, Strikes

By BOB FIENBERG
Many problems arising in labor disputes do not lend themselves to traditional handling and new mechanisms are needed in industry to solve the problem, Dr. John Dunlop, Harvard University professor and member of Kaiser Steel's Labor Relations Committee, said Friday night.

Dunlop's address at Kellogg Center was sponsored by MSU's Labor and Industrial Relations Center.

Strikes have a major affirmative part to play and are very useful in collective bargaining. Constructive phases usually begin after a long strike for it clears the air and makes people take a healthy look at present and past problems, he said.

Present disputes, he said, have been without violence which is a great change from former days.

There is an exaggerated notion of the cost of the strike to the community. The strike is usually predicted, and profits are made ahead of time to compensate for time lost later on, Dunlop said.

The country needs a greater appreciation of legislation, he said, for there appears to be a nebula for passing laws whenever something seems to go wrong. It is usually the unintended consequences of legislation that come to the forefront ten years later.

Another weak point in the settling of disputes is public relations as currently practiced. The slogan approach which is currently used is inconsistent, contradictory and without meaning and application, he said.

The object of a public relations program is to break the problem down into its component parts and to make it possible to study each factor. Current procedure, putting everything together, confuses the issue and makes it more complicated, Dunlop said.

U. S. Studies East-West In Trade
WASHINGTON (AP) — Under Secretary of State Douglas Dillon goes to Europe today to find out how the formal splitting of Western Europe into two trading blocks affects the free world's unity—and the interests of the U.S.

Informed sources reported that he also will tell European officials the U.S. insists on having its share of tariff reduction benefits in the two areas.

State Department associates of Dillon, the diplomat in charge of shaping this country's foreign economic policy, declined to comment on Dillon's tour.

"We just aren't talking about it," one close associate said.

Dillon is scheduled to arrive in London today, proceed to Brussels, Dec. 10, to Bonn, Dec. 11, to Paris the same day, and 11, to Rome, Dec. 14.

Despite official secrecy, experts concede two things. The first is that the U.S. is rather skeptical about the European free trade association (EFTA) established by seven nations Nov. 20 in Stockholm. The second is that this country is concerned that it might be excluded from the greater flow of trade expected to follow tariff reductions in the areas of the two trade groups.

Western diplomats in Washington have sought to assure the state department there is no need to be worried. Norwegian and Danish envoys called on Dillon last week to inform him there is good chance a Netherlands proposal will be adopted. This would provide for a joint common market-EFTA program of tariff reductions that would embrace not only members of the two trading blocks but a wide range of countries, including the U.S.

Pope John Invokes Blessing On President Eisenhower

Audience Leaves Ike 'Inspired'

Friendship, Peace Asked by Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — In an historic, 27-minute audience Sunday Pope John XXIII invoked God's blessing upon President Eisenhower as an untiring worker for peace.

The President left the audience visibly moved — inspired, he said, by the Pope's approval of efforts to find international friendship in freedom.

The two leaders talked in English in the Pope's private library.

Pope John said he rejoiced that the U.S., under Eisenhower, is "striving so actively . . . toward the lofty ideals of a loyal and effective concord between nations."

The Catholic Church, whose constant yearning is the establishment of true peace between peoples, cannot but greet with joy every sincere effort toward that end, and wish it the most cordial success, he continued.

Then addressing the President, he said: "We earnestly invoke the powerful assistance of God upon you, in your noble efforts as the untiring servant of your people and of the cause of peace in the world."

"I assure you I will take your words to my country and make them known there."

The Pope, who has been studying English since his election little more than a year ago, apologized for his pronunciation. Eisenhower congratulated him and said that his pronunciation was excellent.

The Pope said it was a happy coincidence that he and John Eisenhower bear the same Christian name. He spoke of "the sentiments of benevolence and admiration which we cherish for the American people," and remarked on their generosity in aiding the needy of other lands.

Should Royalty's Baby Carry Pappy's Name?
CARLISLE, England (AP) — The Bishop of Carlisle, the Rt. Rev. Thomas Bloomer, contends the baby Queen Elizabeth II expects in February should bear the father's family name (Mountbatten) rather than the mother's (Windsor).

Speaking at church services, he said: ". . . The father's name . . . is a right and privilege every other legitimate child in the land possesses. . . (we) have respect for titles, but a family name transcends these."

Includes Essays, Documents
With the new course outline students read a variety of literature, including documents, political and scientific essays. The materials are written in different styles and times with different purposes to give the students an opportunity to become familiar with many types of writing.

In correlation with reading are writing exercises. Every instructor is supposed to assign one paper a week, Blackman said. These essays include analyses of readings, personal reactions to various subjects and contents of ideas and documents.

Most writing exercises give the student an opportunity to re-express another's ideas in his own terms. This not only gives him writing experience, but tests his comprehension of the readings.

Although a great deal of writing is done, grammar has been eliminated from the course, Blackman said. Approximately

ABOUT 200 students and East Lansing residents attend the festive tree lighting ceremony by the Union Sunday night. Delta Tau Delta fraternity and Pi Beta Phi sorority serenaded the on-lookers. The lighting of the tree symbolizes the beginning of MSU's Christmas spirit.

With $525 Donation Married Housing Bolsters Sparta Claus Charity Drive

Sparta Claus opened successfully by receiving $525.00 from married housing. Their participation and interest shows that Sparta Claus can be one of the best direct charitable programs that MSU students can support, by just turning Mad Money into Good Money. This can be accomplished with 100% participation from all student organizations, regardless of the amount of contribution.

Sparta Claus will fight the Christmas Spirit in the homes of the needy by supplying them with food baskets. These baskets contain a well-rounded diet, including a 10 lb. turkey, 5 lbs. of potatoes, 1 doz. oranges, 1 gallon of milk, 12 assorted canned goods plus all the extras that come from the Christmas table.

Bob Reinberger, Sparta Claus chairman, said the early results are a good indication that students realize the program will help those to have a Merry Christmas who would otherwise go without.

And with the help of everyone, by organizations and individuals, Sparta Claus will give MSU students the satisfaction of helping people in the time of need and that they will always be on the giving end and not the receiving.

Sparta Claus boxes are placed in the Union, outside of Berkey, EE Building and Nat. Sci. Also group donations will be taken in room 343 of Student Services.

Ike Rides in Carriage In Karachi Streets

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — A royal carriage once used by British viceroys of India is to carry President Eisenhower through Karachi's main streets on his arrival today for a two-day visit.

President Mohammed Ayub Khan will ride with him in the open vehicle, pulled by a six-horse team and escorted by 32 colorfully costumed horsemen.

The department has prepared a questionnaire to evaluate student opinion of the course. This survey, to be conducted during the final days of class, will attempt to find out the students' opinions of the course, including their reaction to teaching methods and books used.

Blackman feels that the new course outline is generally good and has accomplished, as far as can be determined at present, what it was meant to do. More complete and factual information will be available spring term, when the department has had an opportunity to thoroughly evaluate the entire course.

Welcome By Turks Stupendous

President, Leaders Discuss Problems

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of cheering, flag-waving Turks Sunday gave President Eisenhower an overwhelming welcome that left him misty-eyed.

Sunday he joined with his leaders in declaring that humanity's future depends on the closest cooperation by the free nations of the world.

The President flew in from Rome for a 17-hour visit and received a welcoming demonstration that he called "the most stupendous I have ever seen."

He then plunged into talks on world problems with President Celal Bayar and Premier Adnan Menderes.

Five hours after the American president was driven through the streets, Ankara still had a festive air.

In a speech at a formal dinner in his honor last night, Eisenhower toasted Turkish President Bayar with these words: "No power on earth, no evil, no threat, can frustrate a people of your spirit."

The two presidents early Sunday issued a Communique saying effective world peace requires justice and equality for all nations under essential safeguards against violations.

The two presidents asserted world peace is indivisible and that various problems between East and West cannot be split into various compartments.

The Communique said any plan for peace or easing of international tension must be accompanied by an efficient and properly controlled system of disarmament.

"On the vital question of the creation of an atmosphere that would lead to establishment of a true détente (easing of relations) in the whole world, the two presidents agreed that such a détente, in order to be effective, should be based on justice and equality and provided with the essential safeguards."

Since it is not possible to divide the many problems at present separating east and west into separate compartments, they recognized that détente, like peace, had to be considered as an indivisible entity.
