Soviets Demand Removal Of Troops From Congo

Katanga President Ignores UN Request

Refuse to Recognize Dag Hammarskjold

The Katanga region is the site of the conflict between the Congolese government and the United Nations peacekeeping forces. The region is rich in natural resources, including copper and cobalt, and has been a source of tension since independence in 1960. The Katanga region declared independence from the new nation of the Congo in 1960, but the United Nations has recognized the Congo as the legitimate government. The region is controlled by the Katanga province, which is largely controlled by the Katanga government's military forces. Students Demand Voice In Their University Operations

What is a university? We feel it is time we evaluated this concept even more and determined just what each individual institution is. Is it a factory, dedicated to turning out degrees and diploma in spades? Is it an institution of the arts for the training of men of special skills? Is it a haven for men with whom one does not wish to have contact? Is it a community center for students who want to know the world, yet stay tucked away from it, outside the mainstream of life? In the university, particularly, the public interest is the public's right into the inner workings of the academic institution.

In the last thirty years the university in the United States has been transformed from an intellectual institution to an agency of social behavior. Its role has changed from that of an academic institution to a social laboratory. This transformation is due primarily to the influence of the social sciences, particularly psychology, sociology, and anthropology. The social sciences have provided a new perspective on the study of human behavior, and the university has become a prime example of the application of these theories.

In the past, the university was primarily concerned with the transmission of knowledge. However, in recent years, it has become increasingly clear that the university is also a social institution with a unique role in society. This role is not limited to the production and dissemination of knowledge, but includes the education of citizens and the promotion of social justice.

Civil Liberties Endangered By Investigations ofHUAC

By RAY MARTIN

The direct and indirect power of the House Un-American Activities Committee is perhaps greater than any governmental investigation in the nation, particularly in the public interest. It is an institution of the arts for the training of men of special skills. Is it a haven for men with whom one does not wish to have contact? Is it a community center for students who want to know the world, yet stay tucked away from it, outside the mainstream of life? Letters to the Editor

Food Solution

To the Editor:

Dr. Cleveland in his column in the May issue of the Food Science Journal states: "The problem of feeding the world is one of the most pressing problems facing modern man today. It is a problem that cannot be solved by magic, but requires a concerted effort on the part of scientists, educators, and government leaders."

I am writing to express my agreement with Dr. Cleveland's statement. The problem of feeding the world is indeed a pressing one, and it requires the efforts of everyone. However, I believe that there may be another approach to solving this problem.

Education is key to solving the problem of feeding the world. By educating people about healthy eating habits, we can reduce the demand for unhealthy foods. Additionally, by teaching people how to grow their own food, we can increase the availability of fresh produce. These efforts, in combination with the work being done by Dr. Cleveland and others, can make a significant impact on the problem of feeding the world.

Aid to Athletes

To the Editor:

The President's recent decision to increase the number of federal aid programs for athletes is a welcome step toward ensuring that all students have access to the benefits of athletic participation. However, the details of this program must be carefully considered to ensure that it does not undermine the values of fair play and academic excellence.

The program should be designed to provide financial assistance to athletes who demonstrate a strong commitment to both their academic and athletic responsibilities. This would involve a comprehensive evaluation of each athlete's academic and athletic performance, with a focus on academic achievement and athletic performance.

African Council

To the Editor:

The African Council of Churches is an organization dedicated to promoting peace and social justice in Africa. It was founded in 1961 as a response to the escalating conflict in the region. The council seeks to promote a vision of Africa that is based on non-violence, dialogue, and cooperation.

Today, the council is working to address a wide range of issues, including human rights, economic development, and environmental conservation. It is an organization that brings together people from across the continent to work towards a common goal.

The development of Negroes in the United States has been slow at times, but progress has been made. The Negroes' struggle for complete equality should not be taken lightly. The struggle for freedom is a continuous one, and the Negroes should not be satisfied with anything less than complete equality.

Sophomores Strengthen Icemen

By Bill Campbell

The normally dominant Freshmen will have a serious challenge, if not the only one, to the Sophomore Icemen this season.

The Sophomore Icemens, under the leadership of Captain Bill Heavy and his deputy captain, Bill Jernigan, have been playing with the Sophomore Icemen for the past two years.

Coach Bill Jernigan said, "The Sophomore Icemens have been playing with the Sophomore Icemen for the past two years. They have been playing with the Sophomore Icemen for the past two years. They have been playing with the Sophomore Icemen for the past two years. They have been playing with the Sophomore Icemen for the past two years.
