South Viet Nam's Diem Peacefully Re-elected

BAGDAD, South Viet Nam, March 31.—South Viet Nam's new President Ngo Dinh Diem, who was re-elected President of the Republic of Viet Nam today, has deplored a recent wave of bombings, threatened war with Communist North Viet Nam, and stated that he will not accept a cease-fire unless all Viet Nam rebels lay down their arms.

A political campaign for the re-election of President Diem, who still faces the danger of a Communist invasion, has been marked by a series of bombings.

Waiting Arms

To the Editor:

The Conservative Club seems to consider no expense too great in their campaign to deport persons who have failed in one instance to women's homes, to the campus, to all possible avenues of escape for medical students who are unable to take advantage of any legislative or judicial remedies by the American people. They have been waiting for capital punishment to be abolished for the next year, and this only in the event of its abolition in all parts of the United States in 1940.

The comments don't want the HUAC, whatever — they turn up on this program that takes our panel of experts, as is being shown in this program, and of the panel of experts — the program of which is aimed at the HUAC.

The greatest danger that threatens Americans lies in the fact that the HUAC is dominated by a minority of Congressmen who do not believe in the rule of law. Senators who typify the state of affairs are themselves.

AUSG Presidential Candidates Questioned by Michigan State University

The Campus United Citizen's organization held a meeting last night at the Student Center, where candidates for AUSG positions were questioned by outside groups. Members of the audience asked many questions about the candidates' qualifications and their views on issues important to the university community.

The candidates, who included representatives from the various fraternities and sororities on campus, were asked about their plans for the upcoming year, their views on university policies, and their goals for the university. The questioning was open to all members of the university community, and the candidates were asked to provide concrete examples of how they would address the issues raised.

The meeting was well-attended, with a large number of students and faculty members present. The candidates were able to provide detailed answers to the questions asked, and the audience was able to gain a better understanding of the candidates' positions and ideas.

Overall, the meeting was a success, and the candidates were able to demonstrate their knowledge and commitment to the university community. The meeting provided a valuable opportunity for students and faculty members to learn more about the candidates and their plans for the future.
Not all high schools produce the same types of people. One cannot compare one school with another because each school has its own identity and function. The major problem is social diversity, says high school principal Louis Waskins, chief of curriculum and guidance. Colleges have not understood that high schools do more than teach students how to get into college. They often turn out students who are not prepared to study in the main subject the college demands," he said. The problem is that many high schools are not turning out students who are ready for college. The teaching of particulars and skills should be left to colleges.

Baseball Open Rain Clouded

WASHINGTON -- A rain-soaked opening game on Friday at the Flemington Baseball Grounds continued to dampen spectators' spirits Saturday afternoon as the baseball season officially started.

The game then would be moved indoors to the nation's capital, but it was too late to make a decision on the weather. The rain started to pour down in a steady drizzle, and the temperature dropped to a season low.

McManahans Slaps at TV Ads

By JOE HARRIS
State News Staff Writer

Harry H. McManahans, chairman of a television advertising protest committee, said on the air that advertisers were using "a sleazy, perverted sales pitch" in an attempt to confuse the public about their products. He also criticized the use of loud music and the short attention span of the television audience.

"The advertisers are trying to convince the public that their products are superior, but this is not true," McManahans said. "They are just trying to sell you something you don't need.

"The only thing that matters is whether the product works or not. If it doesn't, then it's not worth buying. And if it does work, then you should be satisfied with what you purchase.

"I don't think the advertisers are being honest in their ads. They're just trying to make a quick buck and forget about the long-term effects of their actions.

"We need to have more regulation of the advertising industry so that we can be sure that the products being sold are safe and effective.

"I hope that the public will start to pay attention to these ads and make their own decisions about what they buy. They should not be swayed by the slick words and pretty pictures used by the advertisers.
