2 American Rebels Slain in Roundup

In San Francisco, a Detroit native, Roy L. Armstrong, 25, and a Chicago native, John L. Armstrong, 26, were killed in a shooting incident at the San Francisco airport on April 27.

The incident occurred when the two men, who were suspected of being involved in a plot to blow up houses and other buildings in the city, opened fire with a .38-caliber revolver. The men were shot dead by police officers who were trying to stop them from harming innocent people.

The two men were part of a group of rebels who had been plotting to disrupt the city's normal operations. They had been involved in a series of bombings and other acts of violence in the past.

The U.S. government has not yet released any information about the two men's motives or the extent of their involvement in the plot.

U.S. Cannot Let Rebels Fail

U.S. President John F. Kennedy said Wednesday that the United States cannot let the rebels fail in their attempt to overthrow the government of Cuba. He said that the rebels are a threat to the stability of the region and that the United States must take action to prevent them from succeeding.

Kennedy also said that the United States will work with other nations to strengthen the government of Cuba and to help the people of the country.

Thinking of Modeling? -Don't Says Playmate of the Month

By CURT R. LINDELL
State News Feature Writer

If any girls are thinking of becoming professional models, forget it. That is the advice of Joni Matts, recently a "Playmate." Not that she's discouraging anyone, but she just thinks that the work involved in being a model isn't worth it. "I don't like that sort of life," she said. "I don't want to be a model."

"I've had a lot of people come to me and say, 'What do I have to do to become a model?'" she said. "And I've told them, 'You don't do anything. You just wait for the right opportunity to come along.'"

"But I don't want to become one," she said. "I don't want to be a model. I don't like the idea of having to go to different places and meet different people."}

Picture History Has Unsurpassable Beauty

The American Heritage Picture Book is the monumental masterpiece of the National Museum of American History, which contains more than 100,000 works of art, including paintings, photographs, and sculptures. Reviewed by Donald A.
MacKenzie, the book is a visual feast for the eyes and mind, offering a comprehensive overview of American history and culture.

There will be many handsome books published on the American Civil War during the next five years to commemorate its bicentennial. But none will match the magnificence and beauty of this new volume, which is a true masterpiece of photography and design.

Missionary Claims Socialism Violates Moral Laws, Freedom

By DAVID KAPP
Mail News Writer

We can all accept the position that certain nations are probably more prone to recognize the social realities of their era than others. But what about the case of the Missionary? Is it possible for a missionary to exist in a society where the moral law is just as prevalent as in the Western world? And if it is, what does this mean for the missionary's work?

The Combined Nations

The missionary, who is part of the Combined Nations, is a member of a society where the moral law is just as prevalent as in the Western world. This means that the missionary has to deal with the moral law in a way that respects the society's values and beliefs. The missionary's work is not just about传教, but also about promoting the moral law and the values that it represents. The missionary is not just a representative of the Western world, but also a member of the Combined Nations society.

The Missionary's Role

The missionary's role is to promote the moral law and the values that it represents. This means that the missionary has to be careful about how he or she behaves in the Combined Nations society. The missionary has to be mindful of the society's values and beliefs, and try to live in a way that respects them. The missionary has to be willing to learn from the society and to adapt to its values and beliefs.

The Missionary's Responsibilities

The missionary's responsibilities include promoting the moral law and the values that it represents. This means that the missionary has to be willing to work with the society to improve it. The missionary has to be willing to help the society to understand the moral law and its importance. The missionary has to be willing to help the society to improve its values and beliefs.

The Missionary's Success

The missionary's success is measured by the society's ability to understand and accept the moral law. The missionary's success is also measured by the society's ability to improve its values and beliefs. The missionary's success is also measured by the society's ability to live in a way that respects the moral law.

The Missionary's Future

The missionary's future is uncertain. The missionary may continue to work in the Combined Nations society, or he or she may leave to work in another society. The missionary may continue to promote the moral law and the values that it represents, or he or she may focus on other goals. The missionary's future is uncertain, but the missionary's work is important and necessary.

The students include sophomores, juniors, seniors, and graduate students. The list of the students can be found on the next page.

Man Rescued From Well After 6 Hours

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. - A man was trapped in a manhole for six hours while trying to move a cat that was stuck. He called for help, and two rescue workers, Roy Williams and Bobby Alviss, came to the rescue.

The man was injured by the concrete casing that pinned him at the bottom— and said, "Thank the Good Lord I am alive!"

Two rescue workers, Roy Williams, 24-year-old, and Bobby Alviss, 24, have been credited with saving the man's life.

The man was taken to the hospital where he has been treated for injuries that include a slash on the arm and a small cut on the leg.

The incident occurred when the man was at work and noticed that the cat was stuck in the manhole. He called for help and the two rescue workers came to the rescue.

In the field of safety, it is important to always be prepared for such incidents. The man's quick thinking and the rescue workers' bravery saved the man's life.

Film Battle Rages Again

Battle over the controversial film "Operation Abilene," which is the subject of this debate.

The film, which has been the focus of much controversy, was shown in Lansing last week.

Here is a summary of the arguments:

1. The film depicts the effects of the Vietnam War on the lives of American soldiers.
2. There is debate over the film's accuracy and its impact on public opinion.
3. RUAC has called for a ban on the film, while the filmmakers have defended it as a critical perspective.

Family Type Farms Predicted To Continue Dominate Form

By OVID A. MARTIN
WASHINGTON (UPI) - Warnings of change in the 1970s to the century, the Agriculture Department says the family type farm will continue to dominate agriculture by 1985. Some critics of present government measures to limit the size, form, and function of the family farm to prevent provisions from becoming more burdensome as they become more common.
The following is the gist of a departmental study and material in the language outside for agriculture.

"FAMILY FARMS will be bigger and more highly specialized in 1975 than 1965 and they will continue to dominate our agricultural economy," said Dr. W. Nielson, acting chief of the department's division of farm economics.

The department expects to see a greater demand for the kind of farm that employs more labor, less land, and more highly specialized and less highly diversified livestock.

"MECHANIZATION has greatly increased the size and efficiency of family farms," he said. "It will continue to increase in size and efficiency, making the family farm an even more important factor in the economy." The study shows that many farmers are already using more capital, less labor, and more specialized livestock.

Large-scale livestock operations are expected to become more important in the next 10 years. The study shows that many farmers are already using more capital, less labor, and more specialized livestock.

Oksanen Fails To Lower Record

BOSTON—Stale Oksanen, a Stanford graduate charged into the lead a half mile from the end and won the 65th B.A.A. Marathon today.

The triumph was a repeat of a year ago when he captured the race here. It was the first in which snow flurries threatened the race since 1927, and the first in which Oksanen had closer to the end than he was yesterday by 30 yards in a blur.

Oksanen, seeded by a steeplechase 6 mile from the finish, swept the pavement some 700 yards west two years ago, still leading his foes, running on the north side of Dudley Street in Boston.

He did the same this year. He emerged into a narrow lead and tried to break through. Oksanen, who had allowed himself a 40 pace of the road and quickly gained on it at every step, was in a great form.

To the windup, recovered by 25 yards in a thrilling finish.

M. Oksanen from five yards

As he crossed the finish line, he exclaimed, "I'm very glad.

After the race, I'm glad and you get it!"
