Who Puts Pressures on the University?

By MARK RASING

Why does the administration keep tabs on the campus community? Depending on the type of national, state or local campus, the answer can vary. Some campuses are overrun with Communists and their activities are monitored to ensure they do not act against the local government. Others are monitored to ensure they do not act against the national government.

While the Farm Bureau and the American Legion show interest in the college, the main concern is academic. The college is supposed to be a place where students can learn and grow, but if they start protesting or engaging in protests, the college administration may need to step in.

The FBI, State Police Activities squad, American Legion, Farm Bureau and Young Conservation club exist and apparently private pressure on the university to check itsfaculty and students for ideas that are "anti-American." The FBI's task is to be sure that "communists" are not in "total control" of the university.

"I think there are some people who want to see the university become dominated by communists," one administrator said. "I also think there are some people who want to see the university become dominated by anti-communists." The challenge is to balance these two extremes and ensure that the university remains a place where students can learn and grow.
