State News

A freshman student in his dressing gown was led out of jail on a disorderly conduct charge yesterday, April 24, and three other students were summoned by the police to the station wagon parked and waiting for them.

Several Cooper, Panty freshman, and Armstrong hall representatives were among those summoned yesterday afternoon on being accused of attempting to inv - en the pedestrian bridge behind the college. The two men were handed to local police, and the other two were led back to the dormitories.

The chairman of the bridge and the chairman of the former bridge committee were called to meet with the two men who were in custody.

Cooper said he was asked twice to leave the bridge and the second time one of the officers warned him that he would be arrested if he did not leave the bridge.

Provost Miller Explains Residence Hall Plan

The traditional role of a residential university has emphasized the cultivation of the student's social, personal, and moral development. As a result, many universities have constructed dormitories and residence halls to serve as private spaces where students can engage in meaningful interactions.

The University of Michigan has been studying alternative models for residence halls in an effort to create more dynamic and engaging environments. This study has led to the development of the Residence Hall Plan, which aims to create residential communities that are more responsive to student needs and interests.

The plan includes the construction of new residence halls equipped with state-of-the-art facilities, including common areas, study rooms, and lounges. These spaces are designed to encourage social interaction and provide opportunities for students to pursue their academic and personal aspirations.

The Residence Hall Plan is a response to the changing needs of today's students, who are seeking more diverse and engaging living environments. The plan is intended to create a more inclusive and supportive atmosphere for all students, regardless of their background or identity.

Liberties Series’ Pros, Cons

Praises Hough

The Editor:

I have no axe to grind here. To the contrary, I think that George Hough III will not be confusing his mind on any subject. I believe his integrity is so strong and so apparent that the people who know him value him highly.

As an MA in journalism and political science, I must say that I am not sure of the paper's reasoning in this editorial. The editor seems to want to show that the papers of the Liberties Series are not held up by the so-called “elite” of the university. I don't believe this is true. But I do believe that the Liberties Series is a very important part of the university, and that it is not being fully appreciated.

I am writing this letter to the editor to ask that the editor consider the possibility of expanding the Liberties Series to include articles by students from other fields, such as the arts and sciences.

The Liberties Series is a valuable resource for those who are interested in political and social issues. It is a forum for the exchange of ideas and for the raising of important questions. I believe that it is important for the university to support this series and to encourage students to participate in it.

The Liberties Series is an important part of the university's commitment to the free exchange of ideas and to the pursuit of knowledge. I hope that the editor will consider expanding the series to include articles by students from other fields.

One-Sided

The Editor:

I read an article by Mr. Hough III in which he describes the Liberties Series as a “one-sided” magazine. I would like to respond to this comment.

No Answers?

The Editor:

Why has the administration, and in particular Mr. Trump, not responded to the criticism of the so-called “elite”? Are we to assume that the administration is not aware of the concerns of the so-called “elite”? Have we no right to expect that the administration will respond to our concerns?

HRI Founder Retires After 39 Years at MSU

Robert D. Fendrich, professor and dean retiring toward the spring, is a leader in the fields of hotel, restaurant, and tourism education. He began his career at HRI in 1962 and was instrumental in building the department into a respected institution.

Fendrich's contributions to the field of hospitality education are significant, and he has been a mentor to many students and colleagues throughout his career. His dedication to the field has earned him numerous awards and recognition, and he is widely respected for his knowledge and expertise.

Fendrich's retirement marks the end of a chapter at HRI, but his legacy will continue to influence the future of the hospitality industry. His dedication and passion for the field will be remembered by those who had the privilege of working with him.

Sapphires To Cover Satellite

Innovators will cover the surface of tomorrow's satellites with sapphires and other new materials to improve performance and reduce weight. This will lead to more efficient and cost-effective satellite systems.

Several companies are already exploring the use of sapphires as protective coatings and window materials. These materials offer high transparency, low drag, and exceptional mechanical properties, making them ideal for satellite applications.

The use of sapphires and other advanced materials in satellites will revolutionize the way we communicate and access information, enabling new possibilities in space exploration and technology.

Maxwell to Direct

By WES WIETSMA

The restoration of Ft. Mackinac in Michigan is one of the projects that the University of Michigan has undertaken to preserve the state's historical heritage.

The project is being supported by a grant from the state. The money will be used to travel to the site of the fort and to provide the necessary equipment to begin the work.

Dr. Maxwell, director of the museum at the University of Michigan, will oversee the project. He has been working on the fort for several years and has a good understanding of the site.

The restoration will begin this summer, and Dr. Maxwell will be on site for the duration of the work. He expects that the project will take several years to complete.

The fort itself is a part of the Mackinac Island National Park, and it was built in the mid-18th century. It was used as a military outpost and a trading post.

The restoration will include the repair of the walls and the reconstruction of the buildings. The site will be open to the public once the work is complete.

The University of Michigan has a long history of working on historical sites. It has been involved in the restoration of the Great Lakes lighthouses and the Mackinac Bridge.

This project is an extension of that work, and it will help to preserve one of the state's most important historical sites.

Kobsmen End Near Record Season
By BRUCE FABRIGANT
State News Sports Writer
Michigan State's baseball team concluded its finest season since 1953 with 33 victories, 10 defeats and one tie. It also marked the 33d time John Robson has posted a winning season.

The Robsons' 33d victory came in 1953 except for the tie game which was played with Furman College during the opening day of the season.

The Robsons' biggest victory of the season, however, came when they took on the Big Ten championship and the NCAA district championship the previous day and finished third in the College World Series at Omaha, Nebraska that the record was set.

The 1953 squad compiled a record of 33-10-1.

State dropped five straight conference games to Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio State, Northwestern and Illinois, and invariably the athletes out-hit the opposition in every game.

NATURAL TURNS

The Tigers defeated 10-4.

Athletes Get Better Grades

Current Michigan State athletic director, John Robson, has established the pride of the athletes in the academic ranks, and the athletes have responded.

A recent check of grades of 42 football players showed an average of 2.56 for the 1953-54 season. The players included seven seniors, six juniors, eight sophomores and 19 freshmen.

Similar studies have been reported in various sports. The athletes have been willing to sacrifice their leisure time and interest in the academic pursuits in order to achieve better grades.

ZBT Wins Fraternity Title

Zeta Beta Tau fraternity took advantage of 18 Rutgers scholarships for the spring and summer terms of the all-state wrestling meet.

The winners pushed ahead for the second season and captured the title by a narrow margin. The award was made by the register's office and is given to the athlete who has the highest academic grade point average.

ZBT also captured the state cross country title for the second year in a row.

New captains of the MU cross country team are Gerald Young, Young is also captain of the MU track team and an All-American athlete.

.shuffleer

Young's eye didn't fail him in the sixth inning of the All-American game, and the runners were able to advance to scoring positions.

The Tigers had a 21-11 victory over the Engineers in the first game of the series.

Textbook, Poem, 4 Articles Published by English Professors

A textbook, a poem, and four articles are expected to be published by the English professors in the next few months.

Robert D. Goetz, associate professor of English, is working on a textbook that will be published in the fall. The text will focus on nineteen century American literature.

Katherine N. Poole, professor of history, is working on a textbook that will be published in the winter. The text will focus on the history of the United States.

Each professor is working on a project that will help students understand the literature and history they are studying.

Williams Revives Civil War

Dr. Linda Leibowitz, associate professor of history, is working on a book about the Civil War. The book will be published later this year.

The book will focus on the role of women in the Civil War, and will include interviews with former Civil War soldiers and their families.

56 Graduating Seniors Get Army, Air Force Commissions

By LARRY WALKER -

Ann Arbor, Mich. (AP) - Sixty-four Cadet Command seniors, including 24 Air Force cadets, were commissioned into the Army and Air Force Thursday afternoon.

President Harry A. Hansen, Senior Commandant, presented the officers' commissions to the outstanding Army and Air Force cadets for their outstanding academic and military performance during their two years of training.

This year's graduating class has been the largest to receive commissions and the first to be commissioned in the combined Army, Air Force ROTC program.

HANNAH COMMENDED

In his address, President Hansen commended the cadets for their dedication to the program and their contributions to Michigan State University.

Urban, Landscape Students Awarded

Awards were given to outstanding student in landscape architecture and urban planning. The ceremony was held in the auditorium of the campus book store.

Mrs. Kelley, who holds a certificate of excellence in landscape architecture, donated the award to Mrs. Toth, who will use the money to finance her studies.

The Outstanding Junior award was given to Mrs. Kelly, who received a 3.7 all-university average.

Mrs. Kelly was also given a National Defense Scholarship for 1960, which she will use to further her studies.

Awards were also given to Mrs. Toth and Mrs. Brown, who received 3.9 and 3.8 all-university averages, respectively.

U.S. Churches Line Up Behind Anti-Segregation

By GEORGE W. CORNWELL

American churches are in a unique position to serve as a model for the nation. The movement to end segregation is gaining momentum, and churches are at the forefront.

The Southern Baptist Convention, the National Roman Catholic Conference, the National Baptist Convention, and the Progressive National Baptist Convention have all taken a stand against segregation.

Other churches, such as the Southern Baptists, have issued statements condemning segregation. The National Christian Student Association has also taken a stand against segregation.

THE SILVER WINGS Girls, a class of future Air Force Wives, are shown in session. Mrs. Charlene Powers is teaching the group from her "experience of foregoing places." The girls are fiancées and wives of AFOSIC cadets.

Airman's Wife Travels Extensively

AFOSIC, at the university, "We are due to retire soon," says Mrs. Powers, "and have chosen Lansing as our permanent home. Everyone has been extremely kind and friendly to us and we already feel at home here.

The schools and parents on campus have done a wonderful job for us and our three children."
