Popular Red-Head Sits for 71 Years

A wizened 8-year-old girl is need of a "toni" sits comfortably in a glass case on campus. She has been seated there for 71 years.

She was found in 1890 in an arid part of the Andean Mountains by Preston H. McCready of Pitts, then U.S. Consul to Chile and presented to the museum here.

The auburn haired child, now located on the balcony of the museum, had been hidden in a stone tower south of La Paz, Bolivia, for about 400 years. Estimates place her birth at about 1500 A.D.

The LITTLE Inca girl was wrapped in a coarse, sack-type garment made of llama hair. The same garb drapes loosely over her shrunken body today. A variety of foods were placed in guards and pottery dishes by her shriveled feet. Corn, beans and fruits made up her diet in real life.

Fixed in one twisted hand is a charm bag filled with remnants to bring her "good luck." This small purse-like bag was made from a llama skin.

Lest she should have a lapse of memory, a "quipa," or memory string, was placed around one of her arms. The cord is thought to record by means of colored-and knots, numbers and events. In her world there was no written language.

FOR HER protection she was given a "sling" and a gourd full of poxies and also was expedi ent to use them to hunt for game.

Her relatives prepared for a long life after death. The great care was made to provide for all her needs, said Victor H. Houz, curator of exhibits at the Museum.

Union Leaders End Study Here

Highlights of the program were three day-long lectures by outstanding authorities on "Technology and Society," "Organizations and Men" and "The U.S. and the World Community." During the three weeks following each of the lectures, an economist, a political scientist and a sociologist related their various disciplines to the major topics.

Other program activities included discussions on the American novel and other subjects with broad cultural connotations, a weekend in Detroit arranged by the Wayne State University department of art to study the relationships of art and society and sessions on increasing reading comprehension.

Walter Carter said there has been an interest expressed in a study of this type done and that was proved invalid.

Bernard Kuhn, graduate student at Indiana University will provide the technical direction at the test site. He will coordinate the project for his doctoral thesis, Carter said.

Richard Brown, director of water safety services of the American Red Cross, will be on hand to coordinate the project.

Each year 400 people lose their lives in situations similar to those to be tested, the Red Cross said. Results of the tests will be made available to other countries through the League of Red Cross Societies.

International Club Meets In Union

The International Union for elementary and secondary teachers here for summer studies.

The program, designed to bring the teachers into contact with foreign students so that it might benefit their teaching, will include music, dancing, refreshments and, primarily, discussion, a spokesman for the club said.

Normally the club does not meet during the summer. But there has been an interest expressed by the teachers for this type of a program, he said.

All teachers are invited to attend.

Auto Takes Nocturnal Dip

Pranksters Drive Into Library Pool

August's sultry heat forces just about everyone to the nearby beaches and pools for a cool dip, but when a car is found floating among the lilypads in front of the library—well, that's a different story.

The auto, stolen from Horace C. Day, of 2986 Milford St., was found partially submerged in the library's north pool at 4:30 a.m. Thursday.

Day, a food supervisor at Kellogg Center, told East Lansing police that he had gone to bed at approximately 10:30 p.m. Wednesday, and when he awoke the car was parked outside of his home at that time.

THE CAR was discovered by Department of Public Safety officers who reported that the engine was running when they found it.

Safety officials also said that a quantity of beer bottles were found in and around the abandoned car.

Day was notified and came to the scene where he made a positive identification of the stolen car.

Safety officials said that the car had apparently been taken with a prank.

THEY said that the car had been started by crossing wires. A wrecker from an East Lansing service station was called to haul the car from the pool.

Police are examining the car in an attempt to determine the identity of the thieves. As yet, there is no lead as to who might have taken it, they said.

Day reported that his battery was dead and that there was some water damage to the car.

"I'm not sure just what damage there is but I'm having it completely checked over," he said.

Why Not Have Freedom Corps?

By DANIEL ARCHIBONG
(Third in a Series)

Man cannot sincerely hope for peace if he is not free; and progress has no real meaning to a slave. Accordingly, the twentieth century civilized man is proving to be the most anti-creature alive. The proper use of his brain and accumulated wisdom seems to elude him forever. He talks so much about peace, freedom and progress and does so little to achieve them.

History tells us that since the dawn of human society, our enemies have repeatedly threatened the life and happiness of man. These are hunger, disease, slavery and war.

Today, man is curiously turning the tide of hunger and crippling diseases. But with greater confidence he is also doing everything to promote war and bring back the horrible days of slavery!

Listen: If we take a break from our daily chore, sitting over a good cup of coffee, and we think of the East-West modern weapon stockpiling, of the Russian's and NATO's military build-up, of the ruthless killings of innocent civilians in Tunisia by the French soldiers, of the movement of Africans in Portuguese Angola, of the imprisonment of freedom riders in free continental America, we cannot escape shaking our heads and shudder and feel in confusion.

Where is the civilized man heading for? Is it true that his much learning is making him mad? Let's hope that he is not going down irreparable ruin and total annihilation. For this will be the second fall of man.

Peace Corps Drive, by virtue of the unforeseen period of inception, will not hope to pierce through the iron curtain to reach the Russian peoples. Nor will this movement hope to make reasonable impact upon the minds of the uncompromised peoples of the world if its participants cannot help to put an end to all forms of colonialism, to the slaughtering of human lives in Africa, to the revolts in Latin America, and to the inequalities of opportunity to work and live happily in the western nations.

Perhaps freedom corps will be the first logical step in the direction of achieving freedom, peace and progress. Perhaps such freedom corps will help to create an atmosphere of understanding, trust and brotherhood among the red, white and black races of mankind.

Here is what should be the aim of every freedom lover in America: To prove to the entire world that when the American peoples talk of peace and freedom, they mean just the literal meaning of these words for the peoples in the subjected, exploited and helpless nations.

Although this proof should be arrived at through non-violent means of action, yet it should be unmistakably visible. This can be done through concerted effort of the American peoples by waging both moral and psychological wars against any nation that is still exploit and enslave innocent peoples of the world.

If the American peoples would work together to recognize the absolute equality and rights of all races, to free the enslaved, and to make life meaningful to all men, there is no reason why watching world should not focus illuminating light upon the American image and heritage.

As the champion of the democratic way of life and stern advocate of freedom for the peoples of the world, America should start a freedom crusade.

This crusade should aim at winning freedom, dignity, and peace for the peoples of all races, to free the enslaved, and to make life meaningful to all men, there is no reason why watching world should not focus illuminating light upon the American image and heritage.

Unlike Peace Corpsmen, freedom crusaders may not have to be skilled in a particular field of learning. But they should have enough ability to talk the inevitable philosophy of true racial unity and harmony into the hearts of the racial segregationists, into the souls of De Gaulle of France to stop the massacre of innocent and helpless Tunisians and Algerians, and to convince Dictators of the world to put an end to give freedom to the peoples of his African colonies.

To be taken seriously, American peoples must talk and act seriously. They must talk and act seriously, that the American public probably needs a new brand of courage, morale, a high sense of mission.

Letters to the Editor

“Apathy Cloak for Evasion”

Thanks Writer

To the Editor:
My first reaction to Mr. DeWitt’s article “Freedom Riders ‘Pathetic’” was a vague uneasiness. Thanks are due to Mrs. Jaffe who intelligently and adroitly analyzed some of the ambiguities of this article. Raising somewhat, I am able to articulate what may be an emotional response to thoughts implied if not expressed in “Freedom Riders ‘Pathetic’.”

True detachment, if that is what Mr. DeWitt is striving for in his article, is not achieved quite as easily as he would have us assume.

The kind of words he has tossed out to us. I am sure would not have come so easily from him if he had confront ed the mobs in Georgia in this nostalgic Centennial of the Civil War. Exposure to mob violence, especially if you are on the receiving end, leaves you mute, bewildered, and anything but detached.

This is especially true if there is a principle involved that you are striving to protect and cherish. If you find yourself in the tragic position of seeing the right and wrong on both sides, the most you can hope for, when you begin to spell out its meaning, is that your words will somehow serve to restore a balance. Until it is possible in one instance as clearly as DeToqueville did and exposed them as clearly, perhaps silence is the better part of wisdom.

Perhaps the sensible course for those not directly involved is a clearly articulated support for the good trying to manifest itself in North and South alike.

Valuing the friends I have in both races prompts me to caution Mr. DeWitt and all those who use a public medium as a sounding board that they cannot afford to be irresponsible. If Mr. DeWitt is guilty of nothing more than being “in love with the sound of his own words,” he must not forget to realize that he still has his reader to consider. Believing that this is an obligation of any writer, I feel free to ask him why he puts freedom and civil rights in quotation marks. Quotation marks so used are a conventional warning that the word so quoted no longer has its original meaning. Since these words are still very meaningful to me, I cannot understand what Mr. DeWitt is trying to imply. I was similarly confused by Robert Kennedy’s use of the term “so-called Freedom Riders.” It seems to me that in each case a deliberate deusit is being cast on the meaning of these words. I cannot believe that I am a member of an uninitiated group which has not been aware of basic changes in words so fundamentally a part of our democratic ideals.

These ideals still require something more from me as a citizen than a passive acceptance of poorly defined opinions, and they require something more from Mr. DeWitt than a public admission of helpless resignation.

If Mr. DeWitt’s longed-for freedom is to be had someday when we will no longer need freedom riders is ever to arrive, it won’t come as a result of apathy or lofty detachment—which is all too often a cloak for evasion of responsibility.

Pulse Jet Apparatus Does Fogging Operations

A fog-producing machine, resembling a mechanical ant-eater and used to combat insects, is being tested here by J. Hoffman, associate professor of entomology.

The foreign-produced machine, being marketed internationally, is called "Swing-fog." It is run by a miniature pulse jet engine similar to the type used in the German V-1 rockets in World War Two. Hoffman, asked by the manufacturer to test the machine, is investigating the effects of several kinds of insecticides on bugs, shrubbery and grass both outside and inside greenhouses on campus.

The insecticides are mixed with a whale oil base, injected into a tube winding around the exhaust pipe where they are heated and vaporized and forced out in a heavy fog.

The machine, which weighs about 40 pounds and costs about $350, also has a flame throwing attachment. The heat produced by the machine will break down some insecticides, Hoffman said.

Observers of the test said that the whale oil odor alone would seem enough to do away with any bug problems.

Revue Closes Season At Grand Ledge

The Ledges Playhouse will close its summer season with a musical revue, "Four for Tonight Plus One." The revue is scheduled to play August 21 through 26.

The show is basically the same one that was a great audience pleaser last year. Harry Cauley, the writer, composer and director of the show, has added some new numbers to go with the best from last year.

Cauley shows his versatility by acting, singing and dancing in the show, also.

Appearing again this year with Cauley will be Bill Sudd, Marie Boyle, Rose Marie Robinson and Carmen Decker. Of the cast, Miss Robinson is the only newcomer.
LP Record Illustrating Radio Moscow Distortions Released

Radio Moscow propaganda, a collection of material broadcast in English and beamed by high-power shortwave to North America during the past four months, has been released by Cook Laboratories, Inc., of Stanford, Conn. The 12 inch long playing record, "Radio Moscow and the Western Hemisphere," includes Russian material collated by a Russian expert and arranged so as to point out deliberate distortion from fact and distortions of the truth. It includes a commentary to assist the listener in analyzing the material. The record album carries liner notes of some 6,000 words setting out the purpose of the record, how it was made, and discussing the manner in which Russia makes use of the radio medium to further its political and prestige purposes. Except for the significance of their words, the Russian news and political commentators speak idiomatic English and sound like typical Americans.

'Yum Yum Tree' Is Another Sex Comedy

By DAN WHITNEY

Senior Reviewer

Are love and sex really inseparable?

The plot探索了问题 "Yum Yum Tree," a fast moving comedy written by Lawrence Roman, which is now playing at the Ledges Playhouse in Grand Ledge.

The playwright never resolves the problem. He presents both sides of the problem, ostensibly to let the viewer draw his own conclusions.

On the one hand we have a couple who find love and sex are "homogenized." On the other hand we have Hogan, the landlord (Bill Stout) who finds sex and love have very little in common. To him sexual conquests are merely a job and his only contribution to the world.

THE COUPLE, Robin Austin, (Marte Boyle) and Dave Manning (Harry Casey) find love and sex are but two sides of the same coin. Miss Austin is a college student who knows the sex mores of Eskimos, but not Americans.

She suggests that Manning move in with her and in this way they can find out if they are apt to have a happy marriage. She is afraid of divorce, being a product of a split home.

Carmen Decker played the part of Miss Austin's aunt. She changed her views on sex and love to fit the situation. She loved to draw his own conclusions.

HOGAN LOOKS upon Miss Austin as a replacement for the aunt and here the plot thickens, and thickens and thickens.

Just as it seems almost impossible to bring the whole mixup to a plausible conclusion, the author pulls a few strings, sets forth a few probable explanations and ends the play.

If the viewer found it possible to involve himself in the play at all, he is left cold by the ending, which is just too illogical.

"Jane, my new phone number is...."

Faster telephone service will start on the campus Sunday for those of you who are faculty members, staff and administrative people. Your business associates, friends and relatives in East Lansing, Lansing and many other places throughout the country will be able to dial your new telephone—direct.

You'll make it easier and faster for them to call you if you'll make sure they know your new seven-numeral telephone number.

This same improvement will be extended on Sept. 23 for families and friends of students in dormitory rooms. Each of them also will have a different seven-numeral telephone number.

The new telephone system meets the growing need for more and faster service. It is a milestone in Michigan State University's growth and expansion.

To speed your incoming calls, we suggest you tell your business associates, relatives and friends:

"My new telephone number is...."
