Approved Housing Area Too Small

One of the prime reasons that students have "difficulty" in finding off-campus housing is the approved area is not entirely contiguous.

Currently the boundaries are East Mount Hope on the south, North Oakland road on the east, Saginaw on the north, and Pennsylvania on the west. A few comedy completions have been found by students living in approved housing but this is the general outline.

Housing authorities would like to include enough rooms and apartments to take care of all the students. They assert enough home owners will not build the number of homes within the boundary, hence future boundaries are not meted.

This current boundary does not present inadaptable isadesque that present boundaries are inadequate but that there is no good reason for enforcing them if they can be easily modified.

Contrary to University officials, enough apartments in the approved area do not exist in East Lansing. Only three houses with four or more rooms for men and the majority of homes for women are forced back into the dorms if they do not fill all their rooms by September.

A wide variety of off-campus housing exists on the other side of Pennsylvania in downtown Lansing. Many officials have admitted that there is no specific reason for excluding these homes. They were presumably set as arbitrary boundaries because no one knew where else to put them.

We do not propose that the housing boundaries be changed.

Even, indeed, the friendly letter from the chiseled editor of a rival football power. But a sneaky fellow, nonetheless. Ole Miss published on page 1 of Thursday's The Mississippian a letter to the editor of Michigan State News, East Lansing, Michigan. Here is an intelligent, thoughtful reply to Michigan State News, East Lansing, Michigan. We're not so bad. We're not so bad.

Guerrillas Reflect Society in U. S.

To the Editor,

David Jerning, in his "Press Cuttings" column, recently deplored the "Guerrillas" who are espousing a method of keeping in contact with the nation's cities to excite racial, religious and avaricious greed.

To the Editor,

I was sorely disappointed in the Amos's editorial today. It was not as sharp and biting as the previous one. Perhaps it was due to a lack of form or perhaps the previous was more enjoyable. I don't know. But what I do know is that the editor did not have time to write all the letters to the editor that I have written, or maybe Weiss did not have time to write all the letters to the editor that I have written.

To the Editor,

We are glad to discover that a pull from Ohio State Health Services will be made.

"When it is announced that the Editors of the Student News, East Lansing, Michigan, are to meet with members of the press in the spring, we are told that the meeting will only be for the purpose of discussing the problems involved in the running of the papers. This is a means by which the campus papers can be controlled and the editors can be held responsible for their actions."

In other words, the editors are being told to "stay out of the woods and work on the campus." This is a means by which the campus papers can be controlled and the editors can be held responsible for their actions."

Basic Course Summaries Opposed

Paperback summaries of the first term books are being sold for the first time here, but have met opposition from some students.

The summaries are reviewed or condensations of the readings in each course and are sold separately for each course.

Dad Hendrick and Robert W. Gallery, Co., publishers, are selling the books for California publishing company.

Summaries for other terms of the books have been ordered, and summaries for other courses may follow. The university has set aside 10 percent of the fee each term, which will be sold for cost if all courses are listed as such.

The University College provost says the summarizers are helpful.

"Having the summarizer is like reading a condensed version of a good book," said one student.

"I would not get as much benefit as I would by purchasing a book," said another student.

Forest Fires Lecture Topic

Several aspects of forest fires will be discussed next week by the Forestry Club.

Dr. William E. Reifsnyder, associate professor of forest pathology at Yale University, will be speaking under the sponsorship of the visiting speaker program of the National Science Foundation in cooperation with the Society of American Foresters.

On November 7, from 3:30 to 5:30, he will discuss "Forest Fires and the Pacific Scenic Corridor," which is a scientific meeting taking in all forestry activities in the far west.

Dr. Reifsnyder will speak again on November 8 at the Forestry Building. The topic of the discussion will be "Current Trends in Forest Fire Research."

The show will feature a variety of musical genres, including jazz, rock, and classical. The performers will include the Spartan Marching Band, the Spartan Wind Ensemble, and the Spartan Chorus.

Menace From Space Seen As Possibility

Human life on earth could be wiped out by strange newcomers from other planets, unless effective decontamination methods are developed before the first manned space probes and racing exploration vehicles are launched. Lockheed scientists have warned.

An intensive five-year program of research covering every aspect of the potential of other planets and the technologies that could be used to explore and exploit them is under way at the aerospace corporation.

"It is very likely that in the years ahead, the earth will be threatened by vehicles from other planets," said John G. Sarch, project engineer for Lockheed's exploration program. "We must be prepared for the possibility of hostile action from another world."

"A problem of such magnitude could only be handled by a coordinated international effort," Mr. Sarch said. "We must begin our planning now to ensure that the United States will be prepared to deal with this threat."

"The first step is to develop a method for the decontamination of the spacecraft and its contents before it ever leaves the earth," Mr. Sarch said. "This will ensure that the earth is not contaminated by material that may be detrimental to man, animals and plants."

"SUMMER INDISCRETION"
Reagan and his supporters have claimed recently that Christians are threatened by a secular society that seeks to undermine traditional values. This administration, he has said, has worked to protect religious freedom and to ensure that the rights of Christians are respected.

Reagan went on to say that the administration has taken steps to protect the rights of Christians in the workplace and in education. He cited a recent Supreme Court decision that upheld a Christian school's right to discriminate against non-Christians.

Reagan concluded his remarks by thanking the crowd for their support and assuring them that he would continue to stand up for Christian values and the rights of Christians.
