Experiment Begins

Men Move to Case

By HARRI BUCK

One of the nation's biggest experiments in self-learning and self-help has begun at the University of Michigan, and Michigan students are helping to set up and run the experiment.

The experiment, known as the "College of the Future," is designed to give the student more freedom and opportunity to make decisions.

The college is an outgrowth of self-learning aids, and an attempt to give the student more identity and opportunity to make decisions.

The hall was begun in December 1958 and was completed in January 1960. It is located in a small, closely-knit precinct of the University campus.

Several faculty members have offices in Case and students who have not decided on their major will have offices in the hall.

Adams said that Case has many advantages over traditional college courses and that students who take them will have the opportunity to choose their own courses.

Adams said that the college will be a "living laboratory" for students to experiment with different methods of learning.

The hall contains all the facilities of a small, close-knit community and provides a variety of educational, social, and recreational facilities and activities.

The college is open to students who have not decided on their major and to those who have decided on a major but wish to explore other fields of study.

Enrollment Up For Winter Term

Enrollment hit a record 10,000 for the winter term, up 10% from the previous year.

The hall is open to students who have not decided on their major and to those who have decided on a major but wish to explore other fields of study.

Registration For Evening College Courses

Registration for Evening College courses will be held on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of each week.

For registration at any other time, students must register for the course a day at a time.

Criticalism of TV Programs Has Brought Improvement

The news editors of Associated Press member newspapers are asked annually to vote for the top ten personality and programs. The results of these polls have been remarkably consistent. Many of the most popular programs are those that have been around for a long time, such as "The Andy Griffith Show," "Bonanza," and "M*A*S*H." However, the top ten list also includes some new programs, such as "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "Roots," and "Columbo." The list also includes a variety of genres, from comedies to dramas to musicals.

The 1961-62 season saw a number of changes in the television landscape. The "M*A*S*H" phenomenon started to take hold, and "The Andy Griffith Show" became the most popular show of the season. "Roots," a miniseries about the history of African Americans in America, was another big hit. "Columbo," a mystery series, also became a popular show. "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," a sitcom about a widowed woman in the city, was a big hit as well. "Bonanza," a western series, continued to be popular.

The 1962-63 season saw some new shows that were very popular, such as "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "The New Leaves," and "The Dick Van Dyke Show." "The New Leaves," a sitcom about the life of a young married couple, was particularly popular. "The Dick Van Dyke Show," a sitcom about a middle-aged man who is a doctor, was also a hit. Propose New Board To Unite Colleges

Members of the Association of Governing Boards and Presidents of State Universities and Colleges of Michigan have agreed to prepare a plan to unite the governing boards of the ten state colleges and universities. The plan is expected to improve the state's higher education system, as outlined in the plan prepared last year by the state College Board of Trustees. The present plan, however, is not expected to have the support of the state college presidents who are at odds with the state college board's recommendations and who want a more comprehensive proposal submitted to the state legislature.

The plan was presented by a conference of the governors of the state on the recommendation of the association under the chairmanship of Eugene B. Keating, president of the University of Michigan, and John H. Younkers, president of Eastern Michigan University. The meeting was held at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, January 8, 1969.

ern Collegiate Hockey League title by sweeping a two game weekend series over Minnesota. The
