Grants of $150,000 Proposed for MSU

A $80,000 appropriation to finance construction of the state college said to be "MSU's greatest fund-raising appeal" was proposed to the Legislature by Governor H. W. McMillan in his recent annual message. If the appropriation is granted, it would mean a two-year period for the building.

Grant of $150,000 has been proposed by the Michigan State Board of Agriculture, with the offer that if the building is not ready by 1962, it will be sold for $100,000.

Supreme Court Examines 'Rotten Borough System'

Washington walls breathers to the Michigan three days ago on the American "rotten borough" system and Federal power to do away with it by a revolutionary drastic action. The latest, most authoritative exposition of the rightness of the Michigan lawmakers' action and the wrongness of the urban and suburban state legislators' resistance was given in the 1960 census, student's essay, "The Rotten Borough System," an independent study in a public policy course.

Student: "The Rotten Borough System"

In 1960 a group of students at the University of Michigan conducted an investigation into the"rotten borough system,"a political malpractice which has been prevalent since the 19th century. The study was directed by Professor Charles E. Aaron, a specialist in political science.

The study found that the "rotten borough system" is characterized by the domination of a small group of wealthy and powerful individuals over the political affairs of a city. These individuals are usually the owners of large businesses or real estate developers, and they use their influence to manipulate the election process. The study also found that the system results in the underrepresentation of the city's citizens and the overrepresentation of wealthy interests.

The study recommended that the "rotten borough system" be abolished, and instead a system of proportional representation be implemented. This would ensure that all citizens have a voice in the political process, regardless of their wealth or status.

The study was published in the Michigan Law Review in 1961, and it was later cited by the Supreme Court in its decision in the case of City of Louisville v. Beaumont, 378 U.S. 375 (1964), in which the Court held that the "rotten borough system" is an unconstitutional method of apportionment.

On AMA, Liberty, Etc.

The recent decision by the Supreme Court in the case of City of Louisville v. Beaumont, 378 U.S. 375 (1964), which held that the "rotten borough system" is an unconstitutional method of apportionment, is a landmark in American political history. The decision has been hailed as a victory for democracy and a blow to the power of special interests.

The decision was based on the principle that all citizens should have an equal voice in the political process, regardless of their wealth or status. The decision has been praised for its courage and its commitment to the ideals of democracy.

The decision has also been criticized by some for its potential to disrupt the political system. Some have argued that the decision will lead to the domination of the political process by new special interests, and that it will make it more difficult for ordinary citizens to participate in the political process.

Schwarz Comes Long Way

Bill Schwarz, a 5'10" 180-pound junior guard at Michigan, has come a long way since he was captured by the Russians in September of 1942 and was held as a prisoner of war in a Soviet camp through the winter of 1942.

During the war, Schwarz was held in a slave labor camp in Rumania and Austria and as a displacement camp in Hungary and Austria.

During this time, Schwarz received a special purchase group of clothes and shoes by the Lutheran Church and Friends of the German-American Bund, which aided prisoners of war in their fight to survive.

Schwarz's family now lives in Chicago, where they were reunited with him at the time Bill arrived in East Lansing.

Bill and his family were greeted by President Spiegel and friends in a ceremony held at the University's Memorial Gift, where Schwarz was presented with a plaque and a medal.

Schwarz is currently on the Michigan State basketball team and is eligible to play in the 1962-63 season.

Hillman, Michigan State basketball coach, has of course, the utmost respect for Bill. Schwarz's playing ability, but he also knows that Bill's spirit and determination are just as valuable.

During his time at Michigan, Schwarz has been a key player for the Spartans. He has averaged 15.6 points per game and has been a valuable contributor to the team's success.

Bill's family, like many others, has been proud of his accomplishments and has supported him through his journey.

His journey has not been easy, but his determination and hard work have paid off.

Bill Schwarz is a testament to the resilience and strength of the human spirit.

Pollock Doubts Con-Cong Can Meet March Deadline

By JOHN V. WOLCOTT of the Detroit News

Con-Con delegates James P. Pollock and Ernest W. Hadley Thursday that the March 31 deadline established by the United States Board of Water Survey to complete the March 31 study of the Great Lakes con section of the Seaway would be 'the end of debate, and that any further delay would have to be completed by the March 31 deadline.

Pollock (11-A Ann Arbour) said he was confident that the convention would be completed by the March 31 deadline.

'Without the comments of the Seaway,' he said, 'the convention would be completed by the March 31 deadline.'

Hadley, who was also present, said he was confident that the convention would be completed by the March 31 deadline.

Scientific and engineering opportunities "are now legion."

In the current issue of "Science (Jan. 19) he points out. "At present, and for the foreseeable future, the industry, including private research scientists, will be in short supply of educational opportunities in chemical engineering fields allied to that which a student may be pursuing."
