Tear Gas at Berlin Wall

BERLIN—A tear gas grenade battle erupted across the Berlin Wall late Saturday night in the most serious episode in years before Christmas.

The fighting was near the East German border, where a crowd of thousands created a violent atmosphere.

The fighting began when East Berlin police fired tear gas into a crowd, who then responded with similar attacks.

Soviet and Czechoslovakian troops met the East German attempt with orders to keep the operation quiet.

Several police were wounded as they pushed back the crowd.

The hijackers threatened to shoot down the plane if they were not released.

The hijackers were reportedly demanding the release of a Soviet dissident who had been imprisoned.

The United Nations Security Council met to discuss the situation.

New Housing Policy

The housing issue has not died. Students are still pressuring for a more liberal policy to regulate where they may live.

This year's problem began last fall when the State News ran a series of editorials calling for a change in the present policy. Students rallied to the challenges. Leaders and students wrote us letter after letter supporting our proposals or offering new suggestions.

Dean of Students, John Fink, reports that the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs has been studying this issue since the beginning of fall term. The committee is still working and a preliminary report is expected. The committee's acceptance of a recommendation, either for or against the present policy, will be made at the end of the year, Fink said.

ANY POLICY change sanctioned by the committee is subject to the approval of President Hannah before it becomes official University policy.

In view of the tremendous student support for a new housing policy, it seems that the committee's present policy of making no new changes is reasonable.

A thorough study is definitely needed to determine what the exact problems are. What consequences, both social and economic, are involved? Should the present policy be continued? Should a new housing policy be drawn up?

Many students have expressed concern over the high cost of living in the dormitories. It is possible that high costs are a handicap to the students and that the policy of making the students pay themselves is responsible. These are just a few of the questions that will have to be considered. A new housing policy will be a logical answer to the problem.

If a student is well enough to attend classes, the social and intellectual life offered by the campus should be adequate to protect him from the harmful effects of living in the dormitories.

The administrative staff definitely wants into these areas. It is equally vital, however, that something be done to correct the present situation.

A policy which requires single students to live in approved housing until they are 21 is ridiculous and ineffective at best. The PURITAN rules demanding that a student supervised until they are 21 are antirealistic and unrealistic. Both these rules have been retained in an attempt to stop those students who think of leaving home.

Certainly some freshmen need a year of supervised housing, but it is not an adequate substitution for the predicted adolescence and childhood. It seems irrational to view any argument on 20-year-old freshmen who have been living in New York City for three years.

A letter from the student affairs committee stated that "the social background and the social atmosphere that the student must encounter in an college is nice.

The administrative staff has been given its mandate. It has more than enough to do and must come up with some workable solutions.

Local Soothsayer

Eric Bluestone is today's Monday. If you're going to study, better do it now, for Monday is the day you have to study for class.

Today's weather forecast: sunny, low 50's, high 70's. The temperature will remain constant throughout the day with a slight chance of showers in the afternoon.

A Vast Wasteland

Following his speech last Tuesday at the Conservative Club meeting, Senator Karl Mundt (South Dakota) offered to answer any questions which the people in the audience wished.

A Michigan State student who is also a member of the Conservative Club asked Senator Mundt how he felt about what the people in the audience wished.

"It is a tremendous waste of time and money in seeking their goals," Mundt said.

"There's no need to waste a talent. Omission accepted.

Old Earth Will Spin On Star Worshippers Now Say

NEW YORK (AP) — The day may be a long time off, but the scientists who study the universe are already considering the possibility of life on other planets. Some believe that the Earth may have been visited by extraterrestrial life in the past, and that it may be visited again in the future.

The possibility of life on other planets has been a topic of discussion among scientists for many years. However, the consensus has been that the likelihood of life on other planets is small, and that if it exists, it may be beyond the reach of current technology to detect.

But in the past few years, advances in technology have made it possible to detect the presence of water on other planets. This has led some scientists to speculate that life could exist on other planets, and that it may be possible to detect it in the future.

The scientists who study the universe are currently considering the possibility of life on other planets. They are studying the possibility of detecting life on other planets, and they are working to develop new technologies that will allow them to do so.

The possibility of life on other planets is still a topic of discussion among scientists. However, the consensus is that the likelihood of life on other planets is small, and that if it exists, it may be beyond the reach of current technology to detect.
