Scholarship Demand Exceeds Supply 'Five Times'

Scholarships are not wanted at this university, according to Melvin C. Buschman, associate director of scholarships.

"The number of students asking for scholarships has far exceeded the number of scholarships available," he said.

"The University of Michigan has about 2,000 scholarships available this year, but we have about 5,000 students asking for them," he added.

"Other scholarships range in value from about $200 to $1,000 a year and have various renewal and other features," Buschman said.

Critics have charged that some colleges waste their scholarship funds, and that scholarships have no legality because of student apathy or lack of information on how to apply, he said.

"This is absolutely not true," Buschman said. "The selection process is very rigorous and many applicants are turned down because they don't have enough funds available."

"Due to the University's budget cut last year, scholarships may be reduced," Buschman said. Other scholarship funds are about equal, he added.

"The number of scholarships available this year has been reduced because of budget cuts," he said.

"Many scholarships are awarded annually, he said. "The principal interest centers on the next, the immediate future.

"The University of Michigan is one of the largest universities in the United States, and the number of scholarships available is large," Buschman said.

"There is absolutely no truth in the story that there are no scholarships available," he added.

BUSCHMAN said that the University of Michigan Scholarship Program is "absolutely not true." He said that the program has been around for many years.

"The number of scholarships available this year is about 2,000, and the number of students asking for them is about 5,000," he said.

"The scholarship program is very competitive, and the number of scholarships available is limited," he added.

A Revised version of The Star of Today's Fatigue

People with the same last name have always been known to have something in common. For instance, you could easily run across a group of people with the last name of Schmidt, all of whom might be related. However, our story today is about two people with the same last name, Mike and Bill, who are not related to each other. They have been swimming together in their younger days, but have drifted apart since then. Both Mike and Bill have been swimming in the same pool since they were young. Mike is a member of the Ohio State University swim team, while Bill has been swimming for the Penn State swim team. They met up again recently at a meet in Statesboro, Georgia, and have been swimming together ever since.
