Graduates and AUSG: To Join or Not to Join

The question whether graduate students should have membership in AUSG is not as easy to answer. It is a complex but important issue which involves the status of a viable and rapidly increasing segment of the University student body.

In the near future the graduates will have to vote again on whether they want to be represented in student government. There are cogent arguments pro and con which should be considered.

Of course, many would like to see the graduates assessed an Initiation Fee, Notable is Larry Campbell, 1961-62 President of student government, who has championed so vigorously and sincerely last term to have this proposal realized. Now Bob Howard has assumed political leadership and he is as strongly in favor as his predecessor.

In the undergraduate voting on the question which took place at reg. ball, they expressed overwhelmingly a desire to have graduates sit beside their representatives on the student government. The graduates themselves, in light balloting, voted at a 2 to 1 ratio for membership. Therefore, well informed the students were on the issue is difficult to deny.

Nevertheless, there are numerous tangible and intangible benefits to the graduates if AUSG provides or sponsors such as student small loans, a museum, publications, Lectures, also, the Campus Chest, conducted by AUSG, subsidized the University's nursery this year.

When the student body services, when it begins operations, initially will serve the graduates remaining members of the class of 1964. They can offer as much to AUSG as AUSG can to them.

Of course, there is among the graduates some opposition as in

Encouraging Sign

Recently the White House became the setting for the first ever White House cultural conference, as well as political capital of this nation when the President and Mrs. Kennedy gave their disigner honoring Nobel Prize winners. There was a twofold symbolism in this unseemly of intellectual elite. One aspect was public expression of the esteem in which our nation holds the most brilliant minds among us. The second was deliberate underscore of recognition of brilliance often goes hand in hand with political capital.

In planning this affair, the President, who earlier raised the stature of the intellectual in our society, and thus provide

The content of your column is a尤为和 widely held opinion. It is not, however, the only position. Others, including myself, have argued that the United States should intervene in the Cuban crisis to prevent a communist takeover of the island. Our position is based on the principle that the security and stability of the hemisphere is inextricably linked to the security and stability of the United States. The Cuban government has repeatedly demonstrated its hostility towards the United States, and its support for communist regimes in other parts of the world.

I believe that the United States has a responsibility to prevent the spread of communism and to protect the interests of its citizens abroad. This is not a matter of morality, but of national security. The Cuban regime has engaged in acts of aggression and has violated the sovereignty of other countries. It has also supported terrorism and has sought to subvert the governments of other nations.

I urge you to reconsider your position and to support the United States' intervention in Cuba. The United States has a vital interest in the stability and security of the region and must take action to prevent the spread of communism.

Sincerely,

Jim Smith

A COLUMN

Another Cuba?

One of the strategic decisions, the United States has been forced to make was whether to intervene in Cuba. Given our position as a major power, we cannot afford to allow a communist takeover in Cuba, for it would have significant implications for our own national security.

The Cuban regime has engaged in acts of aggression, and has shown a clear willingness to use its military force to expand its influence. It has also supported terrorism and has sought to subvert the governments of other nations. Our intervention would send a clear signal to the world that we are committed to preventing the spread of communism.

I urge you to support the United States' intervention in Cuba. The United States has a vital interest in the stability and security of the region and must take action to prevent the spread of communism.

Difficulties Surrounding Europe's Common Market

By JIM KIBLER

Detroit Free Press

Washington correspondent

Washington correspondent

The European Common Market, or the six-nation European Economic Community, has become a reality. It begins its operation today, but the problems facing its members are only beginning.

The Common Market, which brings together the six nations of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, and Luxembourg, is intended to create a single market for these countries, eliminating tariffs and other barriers to trade. But the difficult task of implementing this agreement is only the beginning of the problems the Common Market faces.

The success of the Common Market will depend on the ability of its members to work together effectively. The six nations have different economic systems and political ideologies, and it will be a challenge to reconcile these differences.

The Common Market also faces the challenge of dealing with the outside world. It will need to negotiate trade agreements with non-member nations, and it will have to contend with the possibility of a third country taking advantage of the situation.

The Common Market has the potential to bring economic benefits to its members, but it also poses significant challenges. The Common Market will need to address these challenges if it is to succeed.

Sincerely,

John Smith

Duffy Warns Fans Against Optimism

The latest report from the Michigan State University athletic department has caused much concern among the fans of the Michigan State Spartans. According to the report, the team is experiencing a significant drop in morale and confidence, which could potentially affect their performance in the upcoming season.

The athletic department has advised fans to refrain from expecting too much from the team, especially given the challenges they have faced in recent years. They have emphasized the importance of supporting the team through thick and thin, and not letting their high expectations dictate their behavior.

The athletic department has also encouraged fans to stay informed about the team's progress and to provide constructive feedback rather than resorting to negative comments or criticism. They believe that a positive and supportive atmosphere is crucial for the team's success.

In conclusion, the athletic department has urged fans to approach the upcoming season with a realistic and balanced perspective, remembering the team's recent struggles and the challenges they will face in the future. They have also reminded fans that the team's success is dependent on the collective effort of everyone involved, including the fans.
Thinclds Beat UofM;
First Time in 12 Years

By JAY L. LEVY
Detroit News Staff

The Michigan State truck squad won what may be its final game Saturday, a 10-6 victory over the Michigan Wolverines. The Michigan State victory was the first in annals of the Big Ten Conference, and it was the first victory over Michigan in 12 years.

Although the Wolverines managed to get the game home field advantage advantage, they were unable to hold up the Michigan State offense, which scored 10 runs in the game.

The Wolverines were led by quarterback John Parker, who threw three touchdown passes in the game. Michigan State's quarterback, however, threw four touchdowns in the game, leading his team to victory.

The Michigan State offense was led by running back Tim Smith, who ran for 120 yards and two touchdowns in the game. Wide receiver John Doe also had a great game, catching three touchdowns for the Michigan State offense.

On the defensive side, Michigan State's defense held the Wolverines to just six points in the game, with defensive end Chuck Johnson and safety Dan Smith leading the way.

The Michigan State victory was a much-needed win for the team, who had been looking for a victory in the Big Ten Conference for some time. It was the first victory over Michigan in 12 years, and it came at a time when the team needed it most.
