‘Our Town’ Major Theater Undertaking

By SOB ROSS
Of The State News Staff

Our Town is the American drama and has, unfortunately, probably been taken to death more times than any other American play.

Every high school, college and summer stock group in the country has attempted it at one time or another on the naive assumption that it is a simple play.

Our Town is not a simple play.

Because of the lack of scenery and rural setting, many directors wonder, after it is all over, why the play didn’t have the effect intended, why the magic didn’t come forth.

The answer should lie rather obvious for Thornton Wilder himself has said: “Our Town is not offered as a picture of life in a New Hampshire village, or as a speculation about the condition of life after death.”

“It is an attempt to find a value above all price for the smallest events in daily life.”

Let that drama group beware which would tackle a play that requires little besides the actors, Moliere has said that all he needed was the scenery and he had to bring out his understudies.

3 Girls Get Home Ec Scholarships

Ann Pratt Scott, home economics student from Rockford, was one of three girls to receive a $300 scholarship Tuesday afternoon at MMS’s 30th annual Homemaker’s Conference.

Each year the Michigan Home Economics Executive Council awards two or more such scholarships to attend MMS. Winners are chosen for their leadership, scholarship, understanding and appreciation of rural life and an interest in home economics.

Mrs. Scott has a background of nine years in Kent County 4-H work plus home economics teaching and plans to teach on a high school or adult education level.

This is the third year she has received the scholarship. She is the wife of J. E. Scott, MMS board member from Rockford.

Also receiving $300 scholarships were Doris Carol Kangas, an Hayley, MI graduate of Elder High School, and Fanum, Michigan; both girls will begin their freshman year at Michigan State in the fall.

Color Slides Of Far Galaxies Feature Seminar

Color slides of far-flung galaxies, detailed maps of the moons and its craters, history of astronomy and the possibility of sentient life on other planets were the order of discussion Tuesday when James Stanley, associate professor of journalism addressed the Gamma Elementary Science Conference.

Stanley’s talk was the second in a series of lectures to be given to 10 Michigan secondary science teachers as preparation for in-school clinics for their respective institutions.

The program is being sponsored by the Science and Mathematics Teaching Center.

Wayne Taylor, director of the center, explained the purpose of the conference.

“The center would like to cooperate with school systems interested in using their present personnel for an organized program of in-service assistance to elementary teachers.”

He explained that the lectures would serve as models for the 30 teachers for developing their own science subject matter presentation.

These would be the basis for subsequent work with elementary teachers in science.

Other lectures in the series will include the logical development, motion, heat and sources of heat energy, sound and mechanical waves, electricity and magnetism, light and radiation, and matter and chemical energy, Taylor said.

CONDUCTOR JOSEPH KIRPS

On The Podium Thursday Night

Head Idaho Dept.

Famed conductor Joseph Krips is described as an artist of superb musical technique who gives inspiration to all orchestra members he conducts.

A Michigan State audience and a national audience can feel and enjoy it. An association of Musicians Congress Strings orchestra will come before a Purdue Philharmonic’s conductors’ waltz at a public free concert 8:30 tonight in the Auditorium.

This is the first time the American conductor of the London Symphony has directed young people in the United States. Krips is a supporter of the Congress of Strings which allows young musicians to work together for eight weeks.

“Devote the student whether or not he truly wants to be a musician,” Krips said. “Muse is not a career but a vocation, for it must come from the heart.”

“At least two hours a day are necessary for the beginning artist in order to become accomplished. The essential thing for a student of music is to play all notes as one. It cannot be jerky or uncontrolled, but very smooth, and again, from the heart.”

“It is not important for the listener to know the techniques of music. The essential thing for the student of music is to play all notes as one. It cannot be jerky or uncontrolled, but very smooth, and again, from the heart.”

Krips described the coldness of Europe during this time. So many people in the ignominious horrors of the battles, without food and life, on roads. Yet, these same individuals came willingly to the concert halls of Vienna to await the enlightening majesty of a concert or asuite.

Their earthly possessions were few, yet the upliftings they received from the beauty of the classics gave them new hope and inspiration.

Krips described music as the “universal language”. His travels include England, Australia, Israel, Switzerland, France and all parts of the U.S.

The New York Philharmonic frequently serves as host to him as well as the Hollywood Bowl. In 1935, he was appointed professor of the Vienna Academy of Music.

After the war, his mastery of style alone brought him to France.

Tennis Courts Filled-- Yes or No?

A 50 member East Lansing tennis club has been formed this summer, which uses Michigan State University facilities for playing. Anyone is eligible to join the club, headed by Stan Drobcak, MSU tennis coach.

The club uses the 10 varsity tennis courts behind the stadium and according to Drobcak was approved by Athletic Director Clarence "Biggie" Mann.

The MSU student membership fee is $5.
(The entire fee schedule is listed at the right.)

The tennis club idea is fine for insuring more persons to play the game. It is also fine to be able to use the MSU tennis courts provided no MSU student is deprived of the use of a tennis court when he wants one.

It is our understanding that the tennis courts are first for the use of MSU students and personnel.

Several students have complained about being unable to use the courts and that the tennis club has taken over the best 10 or 40 courts.

They have made the courts more attractive by using canvas windbreakers and other facilities belonging to the school.

If the 30 additional courts are completely sufficient for the rest of the tennis players in the university, then the tennis club should be endorsed as a service to the community and tennis playing in general.

However, if MSU students are being turned away because there are not enough courts to go around, the tennis club is an imposition upon the Michigan State community.

There seems to be some confusion as to whether all the tennis courts are in use. The athletic department claims the courts are never filled while some students say they are.

The situation should be checked into and the future of the East Lansing tennis club should be determined by the results of the investigation.

Chien's View

Dear Editor:

It was most regrettable for the state legislators to understand the educational institutions realize their function. At the same time, the administrators and their elected board of trustees yielded under pressure. As a candidate for the state legislature, I am very emotionally upset about this condition. I feel the nation was lost upon many opportunities for all. At the same time, the Board of Trustees of this institution are elected by the people. Why do the trustees lack the courage to stand in their own principles to open the door for all the financially disadvantaged students? To compromise with the district-size legislature is not a good example for our future generation.

It is my firm belief that to receive an education is not only a privilege, but it is duty. There is no reason for the citizens of Michigan to penalize the poor generation because they wish to fulfill their duty.

Please consider this letter as a open letter because I strongly disagree with the decision of the Board of Trustees as well as the University. To yield is not the best policy for educational institution.

With my best regards,

Paul Chien

Letters to the Editor

Dear Mr. Raaker:

In reference to your letter to the Editor, I quite agree with you that relations between students and faculty at any large institution must be impersonal—often disorganized.

However, it is not clear to me just what you propose to remedy this situation. Your third paragraph suggests that instructors ought to tell students more about themselves, but the fourth implies rather that he ought to encourage the students to tell him more about themselves. Perhaps both.

On the other hand, perhaps you instructors ought to present some sort of "statement of philosophy and goals" to their students before they begin any specific subject matter. If this is true, your agreement with me by way of exemplification of my agreement, I enclose a brief intellectual credo.

Hoping that this may be what you had in mind, I am

In Education Research

A cooperative center for educational research is being established by Michigan State University in San Carlos, Guatemala, to boost U.S.-Latin American relations, a MSU staff member said today.

The university accepted a $600,000 grant last week from the U.S. Agency for International Development to develop the center. The center’s research will be a cooperative effort between MSU, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Honduras.

“It is very important to our relations with Latin Americans, and it is also an important program. It will be a great asset to the people in years to come. The center is a cooperative effort and we will work together with the universities in the region.”

The center’s director is James L. S. Morgan, who will be joined by the director of the center is a cooperative effort and we will work together with the universities in the region.

The center will carry out educational research with the aim of improving secondary and higher education in the countries involved. Creation of a Central American regional program for graduate study in education is anticipated.

Major research projects planned include surveys of facilities, personnel, programs, finances and similar matters for both secondary and higher education.

Women, Men Roles Crumble

Traditionally masculine and feminine roles are crumbling under the impact of rapid, modern trends.

Yet, new roles in the making for each sex hold promise of a richer, more satisfying life. And the strong family is the one that can take these role changes in stride.

These were the points brought out by Dr. William Marshall and Mrs. Thelma Hansen as they addressed 1,000 Michigan homemakers at “College Week for Women,” 31st annual homemakers’ conference, Wednesday afternoon.

In a discussion on building stronger families, these two members of the MSU home management and child development faculty said that we are moving in the direction of “collegiate-type” roles and the “collegiate-type family.”

Men and women, they said, are becoming colleagues at home, with the rise of women finishing college and approaching the role of men, college-goers at work, where almost half the wives in our adult middle class have jobs outside their home, and colleagues at home, where house- and kids spend more time together and more interaction.

MSU’s Water Role Is Active

Professor Organizes Institute

By BOB ROSS
State News Science Editor

Third annual installment of a series on the problem of water shortage and saline conversion.

In the two previous installments of this series we have seen the growing need for fresh supplies of usable water and the methods which science has evolved to convert sea water into fresh water. Michigan State has long been active in the problems of Michigan and the nation in this area. The work in water research has been performed in the various departments of science and engineering. In October of 1941 the Institute of Water Research was organized to coordinate these diverse activities. This Institute is part of the Research Development of MSU, Launce L. Quill, professor of Chemistry and former head of the Chemistry Department, is the director.

The present members of the Institute are Lloyd M. Turk, Gordon Glover, Myron M. Miller, Frank H. Pedobody and E. M. Laurence, all of the MSU faculty.

Just what reasonable water use entails is usually determined by the courts, government agencies and the Nasa of such things.

At State, the Agricultural Economics department is conducting research into the correlation of these three demands. Perhaps a fourth agency should be included in the above list.

MSU WATER PLANT—Water purification is a segment of the operation facilities located in the South Campus Power House next to Spartan Stadium.

Climate, soils and the demands of farming methods can determine the use of vast amounts of water. It is the job of Agricultural Engineering to investigate this demand.

In the same area, the Farm Crops personnel is concerned with the water requirements of plants for producing varieties superior in yield and meat to present day plants.

Horticulture also investigates this phenomenon, Overloading fields with water may only waste water but is also bad for the plants.

Chemistry research has been completed on the toxicity (polluting capacity) of cadmium and chromium in bodies of water. Quill said that this was a study sponsored by the National Institute of Health to determine the effects of such poisons on fish, wildlife, and domestic animals.

"It has been an important study," he said, "in that positive toxicity data of these metals was determined with radioactivity." (Continued on page 8)
MSU Water Role

Industrial use of water has always been a factor in industrial localization. Elsewhere in Michigan, pipeline water from the Great Lakes is used for transportation, to critical areas in the state. Most of our use drinking functions and swimming pools. The bacterial count in these devices is under study by the Microbiology and Public Health personnel. Rural areas have particular problems involving fresh water and disposal of used water. The microbiologists of the MSU are studying these problems to learn the effects of carrying toxic molecules or organisms often found in bodies of water. Purifying bodies of water with chemicals is fine but you can poison fish for miles around if the chemicals used are lethal enough. The remedies of aquatic organisms to such chemicals is in the concern of the Physiology and Pharmacology department. Water recycle the human body is also being researched on the campus. The effect of excess consumption of water-soluble elements on nutrition is a fascinating study being carried on at the field of foods and nutrition.

There is an intimate association between stream pollution and the number of aquatic insects present in the streams. This study must concern itself both with the waters of the present and the future. There are only about 150 people in Michigan outside the academic community who are actively engaged in the water resource problem. They must be kept up-to-date on the current findings at MSU. The Bureau of Development office transmits to them such useful information, both old and new, in the fields of agriculture, conservation and industry.

Five hundred copies of each MSU report are sent out-of-state. These reports also include climatological data compiled by the Department of Statistics. This is an important factor in water conservation. The frequency and characteristics of weather intensities over Michigan watersheds is the concern of geoscience. Included in these areas in the relationship between rainfall and runoff and the quantity and quality of sediment transported in the rivers during major flow periods. Some derivations have decided (Continued on page 16).

Kiel, twice winner of the Pulitzer prize, has called for the theatre, "to raise the individual action into the realm of ideas and types and universal themes, not just the few personal stories we've been attempting to do with too much superficialness."

Our Town is thus a major undertaking in the theatre that requires experienced actors and directors and many, many, many, many other people. It is a director's dream. Kiel, for one, is anxious to work on the play well before it is ready to produce, and he is trying to have it ready for production as quickly as possible.

One usually attends this frame with an eye to three characters: the Stage Manager, Emily Webb and George Gibbs.

In the Circle Theatre's productions, scheduled to run through Saturday in Demonstration hall, these roles are played by Donald F. Kiel, George Gibbs and Barbara Smith respectively.

As the Stage Manager, Kiel did his best to present the non-chalant manner in which the Greek chorus commenting on the scenes and sometimes directing the actors.

It falls to his lot to use the individual action and his voice. He did it by playing the chorus part of the play.

Kiel was called upon to give a fine performance in the role of the chorus. The performance was nothing short of excellent. The audience gave him a standing ovation.

Several other "corpses" were noticeable following the play. See Vary brings welcome experience to the Circle Theatre. She was last seen in (Continued on page 10)

There was a definite Michigan State note to the United States' 128-107 victory over the Russian track team Sunday in Stanford, Calif. Willie Atterberry, who last ran for MSU's Coach Frank Dittrich in 1960, set a meet record in winning the 440-meter hurdles in 50.3 seconds. Atterberry, who now lives in Los Angeles, caught up with Bob Cawley of Farmington, Mich., and passed him at the last hurdle.

MSU observers say Atterberry is running much better than he ever did at Michigan State and is nearing his prime, although he is 23 years old, an elderly age among American trackmen.

After the meet the former Spartan, a 1962 NCAA champion, looked toward the 1963 Pan-American Games.

"It may be too old for the Tokyo Olympics—I'll be 31," he said. "But I'll keep in training for the Pan-American Games for next year."

Atterberry missed the 1960 Olympics and failed to win a title in the 1960 Big Ten track meet after his coach predicted a possible berth on the U.S. team.

What is the Detroit Eastern runner doing different today than what he did during his Michigan State career?

"He's finally training the way he should to," Dittrich said. "He now runs cross country. I advised him to do that while he was here but he didn't want to."

"The long distance helps build endurance. Twenty-one isn't too old for track men. Willie has natural endurance which he didn't start developing until college and hasn't perfected it until now."

The west coast is not strange to Atterberry. Before enrolling at State, he did a lot of running on the coast. He ran a 1:52.2 in the 440 meter hurdle finals in the 1956 Olympic trials at Los Angeles.

When a MSU freshman, he set a world record of 10.83 for the 100-yard hurdles at the 1957 Ohio Relays.

New Edit Board For Uof M Daily

It appears that the controversy between the student editors of the Michigan Daily and the publication board has been resolved in favor of the students.

The dispute arose last spring when the publications board attempted to dictate to the students who was qualified to be an editorial advisor of the paper and to switch recommendations of the senior student editors.

The editors rebelled and refused to accept the positions as offered by the board.

After lengthy debate, the board has appointed seven of eight student recommendations and changed only minor points, according to Fred Kramer, a mathematics major from New York City, who is in summer co-editor and will take over as co-editorial advisor in the fall. As a result of the dispute, a new publications board has been appointed. Luke Cooper, a senior, of the Law school has assumed the post and according to Kramer, this should improve relations between the board and the students.

Krips (Continued from page 1) Oregon and England. He also conducted the Vienna State Opera, which he resigned in 1948.

Appointed director of the London Symphony in 1950, he remained there until 1953, at which time, he came to America to fill the position of conductor of the Buffalo Symphony. In reply to the question if there was any difficulty with the language barrier, he said his baton was the only necessary tool, because musicians of the world understood it.

"Conducting is not a position to be looked up to as far above the orchestra's members," Krips said.

"A director must be able to work with the orchestra, as one of them, he said. If he cannot do this, his purpose is lost. He is not a master, telling his slaves to obey, but an equal with everyone."

"Of course, he must be followable, but he cannot be feared, for he must get along with everyone, he must get along with everyone."

"No one director interprets a musical score in the same way," he said. This is why a conductor becomes great - because he applies his own theories and techniques to the music to be played.

"Because of this," stated Krips, "good classical music never dies. Every age introduces a new conductor and in turn, a new interpretation of the composition."

"There is one great contrast between art and music. A painting is drawn once. If it is reproduced, it must be done precisely, the way the painter had intended it to be. But a musical composition, once written, can be presented in numerous ways and styles, in accordance with the conductor."

His concert, which is open to the public will include the "Overture and Pastoral Symphony" from Handel's Messiah; Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis," Arthur Fiske's "Suite in E Major," and the second performance of "Trigun," by MSU composer James Nillock.

Nillock's composition was enthusiastically received at its premiere performance at the opening of the MSU Fine Arts Festival last week.

Heath President

Mrs. Albert Heath of Milan was re-elected president of the Michigan Home Economics Extension Council last week at Michigan State University. The MHEEC is made up of 30,000 members of home economics extension groups throughout the state. The new officers were elected at a meeting of the MHEEC advisory board preceding Home Economics Conference, which began Tuesday at MSU.

Earlier this year, the MHEEC named Mrs. Heath to represent Michigan at the conference of the Associated Country Women of the World conference at Melbourne, Australia, Oct. 2-12.

STEP Is Stepped Up

By C. LEVIcki
Of The State News Staff

Michigan State University's Student-Teacher Education Program (STEP) is expanding. This program is designed to give its students a sound elementary school teaching training in their own community as well as in the MSU campus. "Finsessed by the Ford Foundation," Ann C. Olmsted, educational research co-ordinator, said, "preparations for the program started in 1959, and in June 1960, the first 25 students were enrolled. In 1961, 74 new students began training. This year, 114 new students were enrolled. The students come from Alpha, Bay City, Battle Creek, Grand Rapids, and Port Huron."

STEP, according to Mrs. Olm¬ sted, is designed to take five years to train a teacher. During the first two years, the student takes the regular freshman and sophomore courses at his local community college.

During the summer sessions of the second, third, and fourth years of training, the student takes liberal arts courses on the MSU campus. In his third year, the student will serve as an assistant teacher in his local public school and is required to take five courses per term in his community college.

In the fourth year, the student enters a teaching internship under careful supervision in his community school and will receive a salary of about $3,000. He also takes one MSU course per term in his community college.

During the fifth year, the teaching internship salary in his community school may increase to $5,500. The student is still supervised and is required to take one MSU extension course per term.

Upon completing the five year training program, the student receives a MSU bachelor's degree, a bachelor's elementary professional teaching certificate.

Mrs. Olmsted pointed out that the advantage of combining the theoretical and practical phases of teaching. While training, the student can judge from his classroom experience whether he really wants to become a teacher.

"The school districts who subscribe to the program," Mrs. Olmsted continued, "have to commit teaching slots for the students.

The student is given increased classroom responsibility during his third year. A supervising teacher guides him, helps with lesson plans, teaching techniques, testing, and pupil discipline. A Michigan State resi¬ dent faculty member will meet periodically with the student to give assistance as needed. During the five-year, teaching program in the fourth and fifth years, the student is assigned to teaching a regular class in the school district near his community college. With him are the four other intern teachers assigned in their classes.

A supervising teacher is assigned to the five intern teachers. He observes their teaching methods and aids them to improve their skills.

A MSU faculty member is present to give additional help in advancing their teaching proficiency.

"Wayne State and Central Michigan colleges," Mrs. Olm¬ sted said, "are participating in the student teacher education programs. However, MSU's STEP is different and to all indica¬ tions a success."

We ASKED FOR IT

QUINTON, Okla. (AP)—Ola B. Ross, bachelor bank president in this eastern Oklahoma town, complained he was always a guest, never an honored guest, at wedding and baby showers. Then he happened to mention his pristine mare was expecting. Ross got a shower, complete with bottle, a carry comb, horseshoes and a haze of hay.

WHAT THEN ARE WE TO DO?
This question is asked every Sunday in the worship service of Central Methodist Church, Lansing. In fact, "What Then Are We To Do?"
Sermons are prepared for every sermon. The minister offers five or six suggestions for study and application during the week. Approximately half the congregation takes a sheet home.

If you want to worship with spiritual depth, with a "real spirituality," we invite you to worship with us next Sunday.

Sermon

"Piscator in Mission"
that Manultimately came from algae found in the sea. More practical in their consideration of algae are MSI's Botanists who want to know how this substance can ruin water resources. If enough poison accumulates from algae, recreational waters must be closed and fish are certain to perish. And so the process goes: from a nation that is finally restricting the use of water by industries, to scientific attempts to convert the conversion of sea water to usable water, to the research of a major university in the areas of water uses.

It is very possible that the greatest scientific achievements of the 20th century are not taking place in the heavens; rather they are going on in the seas, oceans, rivers and lakes that cover the earth.
