Power Failure May Cause Cooler And Darker MSU

Correlate's architects are designing new buildings to be built under rainwater and running water distribution systems. If the power fails, however, the builders will have to rely on their own systems to keep the buildings running. The architects said that they were making plans for a "rainy" day to avoid any possible delays.

Socialist To Defend Castro Government

The socialist movement in the United States has always been on the lookout for new ideas and new leaders. The Cuban Revolution has provided an excellent opportunity for the socialist movement to develop new ideas and new leaders. The socialists are already working on a program to help the Cuban people.

Miss Michigan "F powers"

A new event will be added to the Miss Michigan pageant today. "F powers" will be held at the Miss America Pageant, which is scheduled to take place this coming week. The event will be open to all Miss America contestants and will feature a "power" competition.

The University will not be directly connected with the 171 public and private high schools in Michigan. The University will not be affected by the power failure.
Women of West Wilson Have the Right Idea

Speaking of Christmas spirit -- the kind you read about in Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." And you see in action when the Goodfellows and Salvation Army go to work each holiday season. A woman of West Wilson has the right idea.

The Wilson Hall clubs are donating their charity the 25 they would otherwise use on Christmas cards to be sent to women of West Wilson who have the right idea.

It has become an impersonal thing, a duty that must be done every year. Few people have time to look at the cards, most of them sit unused.

"Who Stole the Sex Book?"

The Story Of Man In The Raw

The true colors finally came out of this woman's mouth.

The idea of a college education raising the intellectual and social level of the nation's citizens is nothing but propaganda. There has finally been shattering truth to these ridings.

Take Michigan State, for example.

Certainly we all have the image of this institution of higher learning as a place where women become the professionals of the future, the political, business and civic leaders of tomorrow.

Sure we do.

But there are living in a world of dreams.

On the one hand we have our women students in the image of students studying hard, creating, working toward that goal in life, becoming sophisticated individuals (most of us do).

On the other hand we have the world of reality -- the picture of some students stealtihing things from the library and stealing books dealing with sex.

It's shocking, we know. Shock, however, is the situation. But, alas! The library has taken all possible and sophisticated steps to stand up with Man driven by his basic instincts.

They've taken the books! Well, not really hidden them. More or less taken the books off the open shelves and put them on closed shelves where they are available on request.

Apparently there is no alternative to save them from being stolen.

College diplomas! Betrayed!

Take away that sheltered sweatier, the neatly-shaved man of Princeton haircut from some students and you have the man in the raw, bent on devouring (figuratively, of course) those books on prostitution, perversion and the like.

We'll put our money on the library. They've had to cope with these books for years.

"Politics and Poker"

By Jack Shea

"It has been a difficult year for the President of Michigan State. Each year the President of Michigan State has argued with the students of Michigan State about the policy of not selling parking permits. Each year the President has come down on the students and said, 'This is a State University and it is the job of the President to run this University."

Well, I was raised in an environment where I was taught to respect the President of Michigan State. I was taught to respect the President of Michigan State because he was the President of Michigan State.

I was taught to respect the President of Michigan State because he ran the University, the University, the University. I was taught to respect the President of Michigan State because he was the President of Michigan State.

Dutch Elms On Campus Losing Disease Battle

The Dutch elm is an icon in a battle for its life. In fact, the number of elm trees has been steadily declining over the past several years. The disease, Dutch elm disease, is caused by a fungal infection and is spread by the elm bark beetle. The Michigan State University campus has over 2,000 Dutch elm trees, but in recent years, many have been lost to the disease.

In fact, the number of elm trees on the MSU campus is being sprayed with two types of chemical sprays: fenitrothion and fenvalerate. These sprays are effective in controlling the elm bark beetle, but they also have a negative impact on the environment and are not a long-term solution.

MSU Tries New Teaching Methods

New teaching methods are being used experimentally in some statistics courses to lessen the need for more trained teachers, William Stebbins, instructor in the Mathematics Department said.

"Michigan State is in this new teaching program rather heavily," he said.

Books have been written with the intention of answering the student's questions as they arise. After the material is presented, the student takes a test. If the student misses questions he suspects, he can check approximately one or two hours later.

Certain courses are more adaptable than others, he said. The program is being initiated in statistics courses to lessen the need for more trained teachers, he explained, the student takes a test. If the student misses questions he suspects, he can check approximately one or two hours later.
