ROTC Cutback Proposed by U.S. Defense Officials Will Present Proposal To New Congress

A waiving cutback to college and high school ROTC programs is proposed by defense officials in Congress that year could easily be adopted in M.I.C. ROTC program, Cpl. James Halley said.

The proposal will call for

Elimination of program completely ROTC programs in last grade classes

Reduction of four-year ROTC courses in high school and universities to two years

The initial protests at the request of Congress and approved by Secretary of Defense.

In the next year pending for more than two years. The bill finally passed both Congress and approved by President.

Spokesmen for the new ROTC proposal said it has reached the secretary of defense.

An increase in the number of dollars annually. They charged that the cost of the programs have been substantial, costing, they claim, the present number of trains.

The Dismissal Of Dr. Samuel Shapiro

Dr. Samuel Shapiro, a faculty member at Michigan State University, has been dismissed. Although the reasons for his dismissal are not explicitly stated, it is implied that his contributions to the academic community, particularly in the field of journalism, may have played a role in this decision. Shapiro was known for his insightful commentary and criticism, which some might find controversial.

Shapiro was a prolific writer and critic, known for his work in prominent publications such as The New Republic, The New York Times Magazine, and The Atlantic Monthly. He was a member of an esteemed group of writers who have contributed to these and other influential media outlets.

Despite his contributions, Shapiro's dismissal highlights the tension between academic freedom and institutional expectations. The decision to dismiss him may have been influenced by external pressures or internal considerations at the university. This case raises questions about the balance between the autonomy of academics and the responsibilities they hold within educational institutions.

Point of View

Dr. Shapiro

According to Shapiro, prior to his dismissal he was never told that he was being held in his field of specialization. Even if he had, he was not forewarned to get on the ball or face the consequences.

In fact, Shapiro said he had one offer to teach at Long Island University and an offer to study in England; however, he was encouraged by MSU to remain. Here in East Lansing, Shapiro is demanding the reinstatement of his dismissal as a complete "surprise" to MSU, he said.

Shapiro, who always had a good sense of humor, was commented upon in a letter to the editor about his "good sense of humor." Shapiro was known for his wit and intelligence, and his contributions to the academic community will be missed. His presence will undoubtedly be felt in the halls of Michigan State University.

Letters To The Editor

Concerning An MSUO Prof

Dear Editor,

The recent news of the dismissal of Dr. Shapiro is a cause for concern. Shapiro was a respected member of the faculty and his contributions to the field of journalism are significant. The university's decision to dismiss him may have been influenced by his critical opinions, which are common in academic and professional environments.

Shapiro was a member of the American Association of University Professors and when that body decided to undertake an investigation, it was found that there were no outside pressures. Perhaps it is in his own self-interest to remain silent. After all, he is looking for another teaching position.

The speech emphasized the importance of developing new markets and technologies in the post-war era.

Although Romney denied itself the rhetoric of the past, he said during the campaign that any new federal policy-making would include a new $200 billion national health care program. Enrollee also called for "equitable treatment of conserving citizens" to help promote the security and stability of the economy. The new governor, who has tried to dispense with the need for a federal rule to promote the economic growth of low-income families, must be able to work with the governorship of the new administration.

One of his goals as governor, he said, would be to "revitalize the job at hand, not create jobs for the sake of creating jobs." The job at hand, Mr. Romney insisted, would include revamping of the state's tax structure and the formulation of a new state constitution.

Flint—Two young Genesee County persons were killed Sunday in a head-on collision on a rural highway in the vicinity of the city of Flint. The victims were identified by State Police as 19-year-old Floyd Carl Sayers and Reverend Bertram White of the North Star, Flint. Governor Romney said Sunday that the victims were the fifth and sixth of the weekend in Michigan. A grant of $12,600 from the National Science Foundation (NSF) Summer Institute in the fall will help to carry out a planning study for a major research center in the area. The project will be supported by NSF until March 1963, with subsequent support from the grantee. The grant will be used to provide the necessary funds for high school science teachers to participate in the institute. The program is expected to train a total of 500 teachers, with 200 in each of the first three years.

Board Of Trustees Adopts Speaker Policy

A policy of five years will go into effect at Michigan State University, and the student government has won a major victory in the student fraternity war. The policy, which was established by the Board of Trustees, is designed to promote a more active student government and provide a greater voice for student opinion. The policy was adopted by a majority vote of the Board of Trustees, who were convinced that the new policy will benefit the university and the students.

The policy will provide for a speaker of the student body, who will be appointed by the student government and serve for a term of five years. The speaker will have the right to speak at any meeting of the Board of Trustees and will have the power to initiate motions and speak on any matter before the Board.

The policy was opposed by some members of the Board of Trustees, who argued that it would interfere with the autonomy of the student government. However, the majority of the Board of Trustees were convinced that the policy would benefit the university and the students.

The policy was adopted by the Board of Trustees on a vote of 10-2, with the opposition coming from two members of the Board. The policy will be effective immediately and will be applied to all future meetings of the Board of Trustees.

New Postal Rates Go Into Effect, To Lower Deficit

The postal rates rose today and these postal workers will soon begin handling more expensive mail.

The new rates, five cents for first-class letters, four cents for cards, eight cents for first-class letters weighing one ounce to one-half pound, and 12 cents for first-class letters weighing one-half to one pound, were adopted after three years of study, a postal spokesman said yesterday. Postal Secretary John E. Spellman said that the rates were adopted because "the costs of handling first-class mail have increased so rapidly that the present rates wildly are not adequate for the proper operation of the Post Office Department in the public interest.

The Post Office Department is under no compulsion to raise rates gradually. The rates are raised in response to a study of the costs of handling mail.

The rates will go into effect on Monday, January 7, 1963.

State Employment Future Favorable Says Bowlby

The Price of Stamps Goes Up Today and These Postal Workers Will Soon Begin Handling More Expensive Mail.

The new rates, five cents for first-class letters, four cents for cards, and eight cents for air mail letters are expected to add $439 million per year to the Post Office Department's revenues. Post Office presses were running off the new stamps at the rate of 55,000 stamps per minute within three hours after President Kennedy signed the bill.

Parade stamps adorned by a likeness of George Washington taken from a 1776 stamp and the regular five-cent stamp were released.

The regular five-cent stamp was released.

Men and women who earlier picked to Shannon's release are satisfied, though many reported putting the cancellations on the 1776 stamp was more convenient.
