Barricades Are For Pedestrian's Protection

It might seem obvious that streets and roadways are for vehicles, and that sidewalks are for pedestrians; but many people don't know the difference. It is important to understand the roles of each in order to prevent accidents. The motorist should be aware of the pedestrian's right of way, and the pedestrian should understand the motorist's responsibilities.

When crossing the road, the pedestrian should walk on the side nearest the sidewalk, and should use the sidewalk when available. The motorist should drive slowly and yield to pedestrians at crosswalks and intersections. It is also important to be aware of traffic signals and obey them.

The motorist must be aware of the pedestrian's right of way, and the pedestrian must be aware of the motorist's responsibilities. This will help to prevent accidents and make the streets safer for everyone.

Shaw-Eppley Parking Problem

Progress brings changes, sometimes irrational and unjust, sometimes vital and necessary. In this case, progress involves improving parking facilities on the campus. During the time of the construction, however, Shaw Hall residents and staff, as well as Eppley Center administrators and staff, will suffer reduced parking facilities.

Staff, faculty and students are going to be inconvenienced for an estimated six months before the ramp is completed. But, admirably, the people involved in the parking change have made the best of an admittedly inconvenient situation. Coordination between the various interests has been achieved and carried out.

What could have been a "staff and faculty and students are going to be inconvenienced for an estimated six months before the ramp is completed." But, admirably, the people involved in the parking change have made the best of an admittedly inconvenient situation. Coordination between the various interests has been achieved and carried out.

There has been a need for the proposed parking plan to take place. Thus, University police have placed temporary signs in the area, allowing parking to continue until the total construction work has begun.

For once, everyone concerned with the problem has made the best of an admittedly inconvenient situation. Coordination between the various interests has been achieved and carried out.

The Dying American Elm: Why It Must Be Saved

In an effort to protect the pedestrian from himself, and the motorist from the, pedestrian, local police have erected barricades to keep the ambulators in their place. University police have erected a pipe rail on the Farm Lane bridge to funnel the masses down the road, and the city has considered placing a barrier to prevent people from overflowing onto the road.

Although the walk is now a little longer, the barricades are headstone for the west side of Abbott Road. The "run for your life" idea has been eliminated, and motorists can only be inconvenienced at their destinations without any obvious trophies of frayved nerves and burned rubber.

The dying American of the 2,380-acre block will be followed in the improved anhilation of the park, the pedestrian's right of way, and the motorist's responsibilities. This will help to prevent accidents and make the streets safer for everyone.

The problems of speaking only French in a crowded MSU dormitory were solved by ten foreign-language students and a couple of girls who came out. The dorm "House" is a new phenomenon at the university, and it promises to be a valuable aid to the foreign-language program. The house is designed to offer students an opportunity to practice French outside of the classroom situation. It was connected with the afternoon program introduced last year by President Josep. It is the intention of the students to encourage similar individual study programs outside of classes.

The foreign language department and the foreign-service students face the problem of providing a suitable location for the students. The language house is a solution to this problem, and it should be interesting for the students. The only problem lies in the arrangement of the house and the students. The house is designed to be a permanent fixture in the foreign-language program. It is the intention of the department to continue the program and to provide a suitable place for the students to practice their language skills. The house is scheduled to open on February 1.

Secretary Emeritus, McDonel

The special MSU dormitory being constructed near Oakland has been named for Karl, the former-foreign-language department head of the Board of Trustees.

The dormitory will be known as "Karl McDonel Hall." The new dorm will be known as "Karl McDonel Hall." The dormitory is designed to offer students the opportunity to practice their language skills outside of the classroom situation. It is the intention of the department to continue the program and to provide a suitable place for the students to practice their language skills. The house is scheduled to open on February 1.

ences in people who teach in different countries at different points in history can be rather fascinating. "Elementary teachers in the United States, for instance, are, on the average, about ten years older than their counterparts in New Zealand, and most of them are women. Tranquilized Mink For Cheaper Furs

Harried husbands may find a peaceful evening by tucking a mink into bed with them, according to a recent research project at Michigan State University.

The experiment, which involved tranquilizing mink with a drug, showed that the mink could be controlled without any harm to the animals.

The results of the experiment were published in the journal "Behavioral Research and Therapy." The study was conducted by researchers at the university's Department of Animal Science.

The researchers found that mink could be tranquilized with a drug called "sedax," which is also used to control other animals.

The tranquilized mink were also found to be less aggressive and more responsive to human interaction.

The study suggests that tranquilization could be a useful tool for controlling mink in a domestic environment.

Book Explores Social Conflict

A former MRI student, Jennifer Johnson, has published a new book, "Individualism and Social Inequality." The book examines the role of individualism in the development of social inequality.

Johnson, who is now a professor at a university in California, said that her research has shown that individualism is a key factor in the creation and maintenance of social inequalities.

The book includes case studies from around the world, including the United States, India, and Germany.
