Borgstrom said he felt that lower grades reflected a poor academic ground. "I think if the requirement were one-point, it would encourage an all-University average of 3.5 rather than 3.0."

Blackening NFL's Image, But That's All—So Far

DAVID WURTH

Lake Street scandal of 1919 and the more recent college point-shaving episode as the "Black Cats in Sports Sixties," professional football is now being raked over the coals. Proof of the obvious: pro football has risen to become the most popular spectator sport in the land, and inter-city rivalry is once again a thing of wonder.

Meanwhile, as a national pastime seems to be losing its traditional popularity as the fans are turning to football stadiums which are being filled to capacity every Sunday afternoon in the fall. Now gambling has receded its ugly head. And gambling is usually followed by scandal.

A notable day in the history of the sport was Jan. 8. Truly it could have been called "Golden Monday" for the National Football League—one that will long be remembered.

That afternoon the Detroit News came out with a banner headline saying that a coach of the Chicago Bears had been directly linked with notorious racketeers and gamblers, and that he had been on the games, and in no small amount.

The story went on to tell the public that an assistant to head coach George Halas had at one time worked for a now-well-known VIP in the underworld.

Considering the nature of the matter, about the only thing anyone has been able to place them in is a hand that was not an outstretched hand. What did the Detroit Police Commissioner George Edwards say?

Background The News

Trouble In Togo—A Game Of East-West Musical Chairs

"We never should have given African states bursaries," said the President of France. This firm maneuver, three days ago by the French government, has gathered adherents in the von-production of French offices and departments, to give France the financial resources to acquire the former French territories of Togo and the Cameroons.

I am not surprised to see the French government taking this step, nor do I think it will be difficult for them to acquire the necessary funds through the sale of public bonds.

The French government has a large body of people in the Cameroons who are friendly to it and would be willing to pay taxes to support the French government.

I believe that the French government will be able to raise the necessary funds, and that it will be a successful venture for them.

The Cameroons are a valuable possession and the French government should not lose sight of the fact that they have a valuable asset.

I am pleased to see the French government taking this step and I believe it will be a success for them.

Latin American Students Not Abnormally Rebellious

BY BILL DOCHEEN
The State News

Michigan State University students of Latin American background have brought the university a number of problems that have had to be handled with a great deal of care. The Indian student situation at the University of Michigan and the Mexican student situation at the University of Wisconsin have been compared to the Latin American problem at Michigan State. But the problem at Michigan State is no different, according to Mr. Jose A. De Vroome, assistant dean of women.

There are approximately 2,500 Latin American students, or about 7% of the student body, at Michigan State, according to Mr. De Vroome. Dr. V. E. Vandenburg, president, has not made an estimate of the Latin American population of the university, but he feels that the figure is much higher than 7% of the student body.

The students come from all over Latin America, primarily from Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, and Peru. The largest number of students comes from Mexico, which has a population of about 40 million.

Dr. Vandenburg said that the problem of Latin American students is much the same as that of other students. The students are treated the same as any other student, and there is no special consideration given to them. The only difference is that the students are from a different culture, and that the university must take the initiative in trying to help them adjust to the university and to the United States.

IU Biggest Test For Tankers

The Michigan State swimming team recently came up with its most powerful collegiate swimming team in history. The Spartans are now 7-0 and are the most powerful collegiate swimming team in the land. "There's little reason to doubt," said the swimming team's coach.

Illinois' Fighting Illini always seem to arrive in their conference meetings on a high note, and when they arrive Saturday, March 16, they'll be up against the mighty Big Ten. The Illini have won three of the last four meetings, and this year's game is a must.
