Campus UN Conference

That epidemic which usually appears during Michigan State's exams is hitting the campus once more. This time, however, the year seems to have finally infected the University completely.

We are referring, of course, to the contagious disease, student apathy.

Traditionally, the symptom of student apathy has been most conspicuous in the victims who are subjected to student government and, to a lesser extent, the administration.

Other topics such as sex and academic freedom have been known to produce physiological responses ranging from yawning to temporary drowsiness. Now, we must admit, apathy is creating its ugly head at the mention of the Campus United Nations.

Most pathetic, indeed.

The problem at the moment is the possibility of the nonvoting Third Annual Great Lakes Regional Conference of the College Council for the United Nations.

The conference will be here for the weekend of Feb. 25-27.

Newspapers will be held accountable for universities from all corners of the nation will be sending about 110 student delegates to the conference in hopes of getting a feel for the model U.N.

There are 100 independent countries which are members of the world body. And since the word "independent" refers to a delegation, there is a need for two B.M.'d Michigan State students to man both sides of the floor.

Gov. Barnett At Harvard

Of all people to speak at all places,

Last week Massachusetts Governor [name] Barnett carried the flag for state's rights and segregation at a Harvard [location].

Barnett, whose hearing on everything related to segregation normally makes the front page of the Wall Street Journal, was followed by a pro-segregation and marched in front of the theater.

Interestingly enough, the anti-segregationist was able to win the crowd and marched in front of the theater.
