Water Carnival Minus Three Men's Dorms

Three men's dorms, Emmons, Bryan, and East Shaw, have decided not to enter floats in Water Carnival this year. Emmons freshman Elvin Emmons, president of the Emmons hostel organization, said the cost of building and maintaining the floats is at present too high to justify the effort. Emmons Hall, especially, is experiencing a severe shortage of interest in hostel affairs. Emmons Hall president, said cost of building the floats and lack of interest were the reasons Emmons wasn't entering the Carnival.

And Bill Voitmar, Bryan Hall president, has an excellent suggestion; we feel, for generating more interest is Water Carnival, even though his dorm is not entering. Voitmar suggests that individuals who build the floats be given a discount on tickets to the event. This makes sense in most dorms and Greek houses, it is a handful of students who build the floats, and the admission price to the Carnival is high enough to put it out of reach for many students.

Water Carnival is in good public relations for the University, it is not an idea that hasn't changed with the growth of the University. Except that students become less interested in it every year. Water Carnival may be pricing itself out of reach of so many students that is the biggest hope for survival in the future.

Fraternity Clipped For Parking Meter Piggy Bank

The Interfraternity Council Judicial Board at Northwestern University had a field day last Wednesday night. A total of $500 in fines was levied against five fraternity houses.

Four of the violations were probably quite common. One, we think, belongs in Kipley's Believe It or Not.

Two houses were fined $50 each for leaving their parking meters without payment on the discovery of two cases of non-payment. Another fraternity was similarly fined $50 for having two hellions and a pledge who were not registered with the university full term as students. Well, maybe that one isn't as common either.

The Judicial Board also levied a $5 fine on a fraternity for having a lone pledge not as active in the house. As it turns out, this house also has a $5 fine on a parking meter.

Profs Flunking at Teaching

Many students, however, feel that the teaching standards of the professors are too low. The teaching faculty itself is flunking at teaching.

The house president estimated that the meter, with its base still attached, was worth over $100. When the president could give no explanation for the loss, the meter was taken back to the house. He explained that it was used as a piggy bank while in the house.

Understand now, we have nothing against saving money in a piggy bank. All of a person's savings is a person's earnings, excluding fraternities.

But since the fraternities can find something more conventional to use as a piggy bank, it is our suggestion that the house be given a fine of $50 and the piggy bank be returned to the house.

We believe our readers will find that the letters published in the newspaper express the views of the majority of the students. The views expressed are not necessarily those of the editor, and do not reflect the opinions of the majority of the students.

Students Strong In Iraqi Over Throw

Dave Josyling

Student groups have become strong political forces in the wake of the recent events in the world. They are at the helm directing events, shaping policies, and to the student groups the rest of the world is looking for answers. Now, in Iraq, the student groups are proving that the young can mold the future. But, a few months ago, this was not the case.

On July 16, 1965, Abdu Karim Kassem was overthrown by the students. Kassem had been in power for 13 years, but the students had had enough. They were tired of the corruption and the abuse of power. They were tired of the lack of freedom and the lack of democracy.

Now, General Abdul Salam Mohammed, one-time Prime Minister of Kassem, is in the driver's seat, and Kassem is dead.

Student power, of course, may not continue. It may be the case that the government has grown tired of the students, and will step in to take control. But it is clear that the students have shown that they can be a force for change, and that they are not afraid to use their power.

By CARL FEIN

Although Illinois is one of the weaker teams in the Big Ten, the Illini have managed to win big matches against Michigan State, and the Big Ten meet should be a hard one. Michigan State's gymnasts will have to be on their toes to get the better of the Illini this week. The Illini have been known to spring surprises, and the MSU gymnasts will have to be ready for anything. The meet will take place on Thursday at noon. The Illini have had a lot of success this season, and the MSU gymnasts will have to be at their best to beat them. The meet will be an important one for both teams, and will go a long way towards determining the Big Ten champion. The MSU gymnasts will have to be at their best to get the better of the Illini.
