Alliance For Progress: Time For New Thinking?

As difficult as it may be, perhaps the Kennedy Administration is sending the Alliance for Progress.

Recently a British expert on Latin America told President's program as a failure.

This isn't Barry Goldwater or Fidel Castro speaking, mind you. The expert in question is the Bank of the United States and Cold War, and South America, I said the program is not only breaking down but, worse yet, in actually retarding the area's advancements.

Hoeltsch argued that the crux of the problem centers around Washington's shortsightedness in not treating Latin America as a region but as separate national entities.

Unfortunately, the British feels.

Washington still seems unsure that the progressives in Latin America regard alliances between Mexico, Argentina, and the U.S. Government with suspicion.

Hoeltsch submits the following proposals:

1. Create a regional organization of the type which came to Europe in the wake of Marshall aid. This would allow sharing in a nongovernmental organization of Economic Cooperation and Development that would take care of these areas.

2. Leave more of the technical organization and planning to a recognized institution like the Inter-American Bank.

3. Promote more private investment in Latin America, particularly from the United States.

In its own national interest, the United States has committed itself to raising the living standards of our southern neighbors. No one is more aware than President Kennedy that the Alliance for Progress is a task for all of us.

The other criticism of the Alliance for Progress is influenced by political motivations or illusions, unrealistic expectations, or even, perhaps, the hoped-for benefits of a crusade.

A number of our illustrious ambassadors and senators have, not infrequently, become self-appointed experts on Latin America's problem-solving. For the most part, their criticisms and alternatives have been overstatements and distortions of the facts available.

We shouldn't, except for the dreamers, try to enforce the program to work miracles overnight. There would be moments of discouragement, of disillusion, of stagnation. But it seems that the program is still evolving for slower and with less success than Administration officials are willing to admit.

When this happens, perhaps the time for serious thinking and reevaluation is at hand.

Romney And Education

Our George Romney has asked the Legislature to appropriate $375,000 for building projects at 15 state colleges and universities.

Mr. Romney's share of $250,000 is the largest, although Romney has been active in the Senate's American Association of University Professors for recommending budget cuts. When we requested, we feel he has done the best for the state he has to work with.

At a recent news conference, Romney said education, given the deplorable condition that must be done to restore confidence in Michigan's financial integrity, is aware of higher education's problems, but insists that these things come first. In this case, the Romney is strengthening Michigan's troubled economic picture.

Who's The Savage?

It's been said that people are very hard to classify. And we're hopeful that this is true. This week's class debate principal in the front row of the Alliance's plan.

"Four Course," head of the cap-and-gown series, which schedules fall semester at the University's campus, plans the Alliance meetings.

The Alliance includes such things as pianists, a jazz band, and poets. It was planned not only for students but, primarily, to provide entertainment for the "high class" people at the Alliance's conferences and meetings.

We think it's a fine idea—more evidence that MIU is growing culturally as well as physically and academically.

Michigan Squad Hits Spartan Pool

Michigan's Wolverines offer the Big Ten's best chance at an upset against the Notre Dame Fighting Irish this weekend. Including the senior class are Bobby Murray, who leads the nation in scoring, and Tony Halloran, who is tied for third place. Michigan defeated the Fighting Irish last month, 6-1, and will look to make it three straight wins over Notre Dame. Michigan remains on the outside of the conference's Cinderella tournament. The Wolverines are currently the number three team in the Big Ten

Carl Luckey is one of six first-year brothers to play for the MDL, and has the unique opportunity to play with his "twin" brother, Tom Luckey.

The Luckey brothers get in game against Minnesota Friday night and tom the Spartans Saturday night. Carl and Tom are the only two brothers to play in three games of a split series.

Carl and Tom Luckey play the same position and have the same playing style. They have learned to work together on the ice.

The brothers' biggest challenge will be to play against each other. They will work hard to gain the upper hand.

Saturday May Decide Conference Net Race

By JOHN VAM GORDON
Of The State News

Before last weekend there were four teams battling for the league championship — Ohio State, Michigan, Northwestern and Wisconsin. The Buckeyes, Huskies and Badgers were tied at the top, 11-4. But Wisconsin, having defeated Minnesota Monday, 6-3, and defeated Ohio State Wednesday, 2-0, may well be on its way to victory. The remaining teams of the league are Michigan, Northwestern and Ohio State. Of these teams, Michigan is not as formidable as the Buckeyes and Huskies.

Ohio State was defeated by Michigan, 3-2, Wednesday afternoon, and could well be the victor of the conference by the end of the season. Northwestern and Michigan still have a good chance of making the championship, but Ohio State, with its recent activities, is the favorite to win the conference.

Quebec’s Separation Called For

By JIM OLMSTEAD
Of The State News

French Canadians in Canada have thrown their lot with Quebec, which, in a separate Quebec, would assume responsibility for everything within its province's jurisdiction—education, welfare, health, and even foreign relations, if it so chooses.

"The French Canadians," reported JIM OLMSTEAD, writing from Montreal, "are dedicated to establishing Canadian sovereignty and independence in Quebec, as the Constitution of Quebec's population, and as its citizens.

A SEPARATE QUEBEC—Pierre de Bellefeuille, editor of "Le Magazine Maclean," Georges J. Joyous, chairman of the department of foreign languages at McGill; and Marcel Choput, president of the Assembly for National Independence, met at the Canadian-American Seminar, The seminar was sponsored by the College of Arts and Letters.

Dr. Bellfeuille, speaking for Quebec, said that "the unity of Canada is not the same as the unity of Quebec." He added, "The French-Canadian Canadians are not willing to remain within the framework of the present government."

Dr. Joyous said, "Our country is being systematically destroyed, our freedom and our independence are being systematically destroyed."

The French-Canadians want to separate from Canada, and they are making it clear that they do not want to remain within the framework of the present government."

Dr. Choput said, "There is no question of separation. We want to be free and independent."

The French-Canadians have organized themselves into a separate Quebec, and they are making it clear that they do not want to remain within the framework of the present government."

Grill Firing Results In Picketing

Several students of the Michigan State University College of Veterinary Medicine picketed in front of the main office of the college Monday morning. The protest is against what some students consider to be the unfair treatment of students by the college administration. The students claim that the administration is not doing enough to ensure the right to picket, and that picketing is being discouraged.

Vet Surgery Facilities Kept Sterile At Giltnor

All surgical procedures at the Gilnor surgery center are kept sterile by the use of a new surgical technique. The procedure involves the use of a sterile solution that is applied to the surgical area before the operation begins. This solution helps to prevent the spread of bacteria and keeps the operation area sterile.
