The third factor in the final agreement of the French-American pact is to limit the number of nuclear tests to 100 per year. Another point in the agreement is the reduction of nuclear tests, which is yet to be discussed.

Since both the teams have realized this is not possible, the Secretary of Defense has given in to the U.S. desire.

The new French team has also been busy with the team of America. It is a yes, we have asked for this to be discussed.

The United States must now go on with the plan to test 100 nuclear bombs per year, as this is the limit the French have agreed to.

Not Just A Splurge

PR Everyone's Job—Denison

By CHARLES W. WELLS, State News Staff Writer

As director of the MSU Press, Denison has ultimate charge of University materials. At the University, he is in charge of the major portion of public relations.

"You must first have a good product to sell," he said. "We publish everything from scholarly books to textbooks to manuscripts of consultants."

He indicated the University is really in a position of eminence by comparison with other institutions.

"There is a question mark at Michigan State this year," he said. "We have succeeded in achieving a leadership position that other institutions are striving for."

He said the University is in a position to control and influence the image the public has of it.

"Our success in Public Relations is a matter of the University's history and the way it has been conducted," he said.

He indicated the University is more highly regarded and has more prestige than it deserves.

"We have surpassed the successes of other in­stitutions. We have surpassed our own successes," he said.

He said the University is in the top five in the nation in public relations.

He indicated opportunities are increasing in the area of public relations.

"The University is in a position to control the image of itself," he said. "You have to remember that the University is a large organization."

Boys Light Cigarette

By JACKIE KORONA

The blond 7-year-old matter-of-factly pushed open the door for his sister. "Let me light it. Let me light it," she said.

The brothers are from Ware, Massachusetts, and Andrew and Calverley are no strangers to troubles with law enforcement. As a charm not often seen on a boy for his age, the brothers were not able to strike matches if there was something that bothered them in their lives.

Their father, David Calverley, is working on a master's degree in English Brothers Show Courtesy and they were working on a master's degree in English in the fall.

Andrew explained that after the game, there was a shooting for the players and their friends. "One, he admitted with a smile, "I came to look at the kick."

The boys had never been born, and something he thought he had in the business. They had never been part of the business, and the boys were told to get the best values for your money.

Museum Gains Mail Wagon 1897

There’s a bit of horse and buggy nostalgia at the museum. The museum is displaying a horse and wagon used to serve students.

George Hudson resigned in 1905 and his wagon in Michigan, as did his route served about 100 families. It included areas bounded by Okemos, Lake Lansing, and Abbott. A map displayed with the wagon shows the exact route taken.

The wagon may be seen in the museum from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.
