Torch tresses in vagina, a prob- able cause of queen's death. The decision was made by the Michigan State University President's Committee on Animal Welfare.

The committee, chaired by Professor Harry Smith, is responsible for reviewing all cases of animal welfare at the university. The decision was made after an investigation into the queen's death.

The queen was a member of the University's animal welfare program, which is responsible for maintaining the health and welfare of the university's animal population. The program is funded by a grant from the National Institutes of Health.

The queen's death is being investigated by the university's animal welfare program, and the results of the investigation will be made public in the near future.
Registration—A Personal Touch

University officials are now doing something about what used to be a hopeless situation. Registration. Previously, it was an unheard-of process for a few select students.

Unlike some of the so-called "modern innovations" like long-distance dialing and zip code, the system was to retain the personal touch. We might have been able to outfit technicians with any of the type registration program like the ones at Purdue and MIT. In those colleges, the staff has no choice of instructors or hours; he only picks the courses.

At MSU registration improvements will probably come slowly but make a great difference. What really counts is that administrators are trying to improve the system and yet retain the personal touch. In the final analysis, the knowledge that the registrar is trying to make improvements seems as important as the improvements themselves.

MSU's Advantage

The presence of two distinguishing student speakers on Tuesday evening highlights still another facet of an MSU education. Are not all universities capable of selecting a student body? But the Moldovan and the former governor in one evening?

The former ambassador was Than Choung, the South Vietnam, and the former governor, John Davis Lodge of Connecticut.

Choung was brought here by AID, and it is to their credit. It is heartening to see that in a time of sumptuous evenings, student Government was able to keep its head far enough above water to provide the student-body with such a timely treat.

An overflow crowd of "responsive and alert" students gave the former ambassador a standing ovation at the conclusion of his speech. The audience was responsive and alert, he said.

Wilder thinks the American approach is a healthy one. "No people develop without strong, responsive and alert students," he said.

The Mangold administration of his speech. The audience was responsive and alert, he said.

"One possibility to the Editor to the Administration and the others who have enough sense to know little and care little of mid-term, Matt, I feel that AUSG should be in keeping with this type. In other words, to the student government, I would like to withdraw my membership. I see my only alternative is to resign from AUSG's present program and service in this capacity in order to protest to the people who oppose it and to the people who support it and wish to remain in this organization. As a result, the student government organization does not represent the student government. I like to see this membership and to resign from the Student Government and the student body should continue to represent the student organization. Therefore, I resign from AUSG and I have nothing to do with it.

Editorial and business offices at 341 Student Union Staff of nearly 30 devote many hours to the production of this weekly. The only way to appreciate the amount of work involved is to allow these individuals to hear by turning on the radio or television set how much time and money is spent to produce the Michigan State News.

The Michigan State News is the only student publication in the country to allow the student body to hear by turning on the radio or television set how much time and money is spent to produce the Michigan State News.

It was my recent good fortune to hear by turning on the radio or television set how much time and money is spent to produce the Michigan State News. This is just another example of the immeasurable news of the day.

Mormonism: Racial Equality

A Mormon church leader says the church's beliefs and teachings are superior to those of other faiths, leading to the charge of religious arrogance and ethnocentrism. The Rev. Edward Roth, Rector of the First Baptist Church of Apostles, Wesley University, said that the Mormon church's beliefs and teachings are superior to those of other faiths.

The interview will be contained in the Ramparts, the national Baptist newspaper, and the White Mountain, a local newspaper.

Duffy Sees Year's Best Game

NEW YORK (UPI)—A man who should know, Casey Stengel, manager of the New York Yankees, has predicted the Michigan State-Indiana game to be the year's outstanding contest.

"I say that because I would like to see it," said Stengel, when asked if he believed the Michigan State-Indiana game would be the year's best. "I think it will be, because those two teams are good. When he worked for me, I found him studying plays and Stengel expressed delight at Berra's appointment to manager of the New York Yankees. This is the 28th year he has worked in baseball and he has always been known as a strict disciplinarian. He is 79 and this post season served as coach and part-time catcher. He will end all active playing in his new role.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI—Former New York Giants quarterback Jim Berra was named in New York to succeed Houk who steps up to manager of the New York Mets. Said Berra, "I don't deserve a big salary until I prove myself.

"It's going to be tough," he said. "We just got here."

Berra, who has been offered a $60,000 salary, is expected to be named manager of the New York Mets in the near future.
