Apathy Again?

Should students be able to cast an automatic "vote" when they will not take the time to go to the polls? Student apathy should not be allowed to kill the AUSG's hands as it does under the present constitution.

The constitution says that for any change in student assessment to pass, a majority of the students must vote. This means that the student who does not vote automatically casts a 'no' ballot. It also means that, no matter how justified one's assessments might be, the proposal is doomed. To pass, 14,000 students would have to vote while the average turnout for an AUSG election is around 5,000.

The proposed change in the assessment clause, Proposal 2, which is before the students today and Wednesday, would allow such a proposal to pass with a simple majority of the votes cast in all-University elections.

True, every student would be directly affected by a change in assessments, but, it is also true that a student can protect his rights simply by voting. If he is unwilling to do this, then he cannot be bothered with how the outcome of the vote will effect him.

The present constitution is still in effect which means that for Proposal 2 to pass, 14,000 must cast votes. AUSG should be given a chance to remove its shackles by having a majority of the student body turn out for the election.

Ngô Goch ... At Last

Eighty years ago, with the blessing of the United States, Ngô Đình Diệm installed himself as the leader of South Vietnam.

Now, eight years later, Diệm has been deposed, again with the blessing of Washington.

The situation in South Vietnam had in recent months become so volatile that we could not be shocked at the recent course of events. The Indian national poet, Rabindranath Tagore, New Delhi Statesman put it aptly: "It is not only the crown that the army seizes in a coup in South Vietnam it is that that did not take place sooner."

With his nation's fate periled by Viet Cong insurgents raging throughout the country, general Diệm went on to antagonise the majority of people and his allies.

His forces raided Buddhist pagodas and imprisoned those who expressed opposition. The latter even included high school students.

He accused member of the U.S. press corps of unfair bias and inaccuracy. He accused Washington of attempting to unseat him.

Organized Confusion?

There's another report to last week's confusion with respect to the Homecoming Dance and late permit for coeds. If the Dean of Students knew he didn't.

Add to all this a growing apathy to ensure perfect fit washing and a growing apathy of belief in the powers of God without doubting or questioning the do believers have always mind.

McDonell Council Speaks

To the Editor:

(During the past few weeks we have been reading the opinions of students seeking liberty to utilize McDonell Hall and its advisory staff, starting Mr. Emery Commum. The most prominent of these opinions have been the AUSG-Councils - both of them under the watchful eyes of McDonell Hall. Cindy, of achieving a higher degree of respect and cooperation have been shown."

By the way, Mr. Commum's decision to pursue the McNair-AUSG meeting -- that we rather and wholeheartedly express our position that and still do. McDonell Hall is barely ready for occupancy. We cannot see the idea of a public approval of the hall being the main point.

The recent coup, from all that we have been able to gather from the hectic area of rumor and fact coming from Northampton, will benefit the U.S. cause. But far more important to the reawakening of hope, which it must give the people of that small, ravaged land, is the recognition of his rights simply by voting. Morocco, Algeria Calm After 3 Days Of Shelling

The French claimed to have driven the rebels into the mountains and to have captured at least 350 prisoners, while the rebels said that the French had lost more than 200 men. The exact number of casualties was not known, but it was clear that the fighting had been intense.

The French President, Charles de Gaulle, had ordered the military operation to prevent the spread of the Algerian rebellion to the nearby Sahara Desert, where French troops were also engaged in a long-running conflict with the Tuareg people. The French had already lost thousands of men in the Sahara, and de Gaulle was determined to prevent a similar fate in Algeria.

The rebels, who were led by the charismatic leader of the Front de Libération Nationale (FLN), Alger Hissène, had been fighting for independence from France since 1954. The French had refused to grant them independence, and the conflict had dragged on for more than a decade.

The French military operation began on November 3, 1963, with a surprise attack on rebel positions in the Aures Mountains. The French had been able to capture most of the rebel-held territory, but the rebels were able to withdraw and regroup. The fighting continued for three days, with both sides suffering heavy losses.

Despite the French claim of victory, it was clear that the rebels had not been defeated. The rebels were able to retreat into the mountains and continue their fight for independence. The French were left with a long and expensive conflict that would last for another decade.
44-Yarder Did It ‘New’ Job For Lattimer

By JEROME CAPLAN
State News, Sportswriter

Testifying before the Senate Labor Committee on Tuesday, November 5, 1963, former fullback Earl Lattimer said that "It’s time the nation’s labor policies undergo a change."

Lattimer, who had been a standout on offense at the University of Michigan, said that "Under the present system, the only way to make a living is to work for someone else."

"I think it’s time we had a new law that would allow people to work for themselves," Lattimer said. "That way, they could earn a living without having to worry about being fired or losing their jobs."

Business Booming For Xerox

Xerox, the library copying service, has made an average of 10,000 copies a month during the first two years. Since then, it has come to as high as 25,000 by the library and, covering a chapter or articles from a book or report which the user is circulating.

Students and faculty alike use the service. The cost is 10 cents per page. Only one chapter per book or article from a magazine may be copied and only one copy today.

"They who wish to own their drive's "license," passport, or work experience cannot be considered. Because Xerox is limited to International affiliations.

The time involved in making a home copy and bringing it to the Xerox desk and having the attention of the machine is about one hour and paying the 10 cents per page, the moneys are not as bad as one might think.

CHEATED BY YOUR MEMORY?

A celebrated publisher in Los Angeles, Calif., has come up with a fantastic plan to solve a problem that many people have been facing. The plan is not only effective, but also simple to use.

According to this publisher, the plan is based on a new method that allows users to store and retrieve information in a more efficient manner. The system is designed to help people overcome the problem of memory loss.

The plan works by creating a digital database of information that is accessible to the user at any time. The database is updated regularly to ensure that it remains accurate and relevant.

The system is easy to use and requires minimal effort from the user. It is also available in a variety of languages to accommodate a wide range of users.

The plan has been well received by users and has been praised for its effectiveness in solving the problem of memory loss. It is available for purchase on the publisher's website.
