Paris Plans Peking Embassy;
Will Maintain Two-China Policy

WASHINGTON—President John F. Kennedy Monday announced plans to open an American Embassy in the Chinese capital of Peking and to appoint an ambassador to that city, following the recent recognition of China by France. This decision was made jointly by France and the United States, two countries which had not established diplomatic relations with the Chinese government before now. The announcement was made after a meeting with Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, who also declared that France and China would open reciprocal embassies in their capitals by May 1.

De Gaulle Recognizes Red China

De Gaulle, the French President, announced Monday that France had recognized the People's Republic of China and would open an embassy in Peking. This move follows the recent recognition of China by the United States and the political changes in Europe. It is expected that other countries will follow suit, and that the diplomatic and economic ties between China and the world will increase. The move is seen as a significant step in the complex diplomatic relations between the United States and China.

Margaret Smith

Eyes Nomination

WASHINGTON—Margaret Smith was nominated by President Kennedy as ambassador to the People's Republic of China. This nomination is expected to face some opposition, as Smith is a known critic of the Chinese government. The Senate is expected to vote on her nomination next week.

Farmers' Plan

Exhibits Here

The 48th annual Michigan State Fair, which is held by the Michigan Farm Bureau, will exhibit 100,000 square feet of exhibits and displays. The fair is expected to draw over 500,000 visitors over the three-week period, and will feature exhibits on agriculture, horticulture, and rural life. The fair is a major event in the state, and is expected to draw a large crowd.

Poodle Advertises

"Saks" Fashions

Some people have dogs. Some people have cats. But they all have fashion. This advertisement features a poodle wearing "Saks" fashions, and is accompanied by the slogan, "For the dogs who like to look good." The advertisement is for a new line of pet clothing, and is expected to be a hit among pet owners.

COLD WEATHER GEAR — Hoods, scarfs and furry hats were much in evidence Monday as the weather turned colder. The students at MSU were seen wearing these items to stay warm.

Kennedy Building: Which One?

"Lest we forget," read the petition, which was introduced at the new International Center for the late President John F. Kennedy. The petition was signed by students who had decided that the center could be a meaningful and lasting memorial to the slain leader, and they were determined that their plan would be carried through.

Then last week, President Hannah announced an alternate plan—towards the building of a dormitory that are to be built next year and opened for full term, 1965, after Kennedy. Evidently, everyone is agreed that some sort of memorial should be named Kennedy, and the problem is to choose the building.

If we choose the basketball building, it will come from our point of view to name it the International Center.

Admission Policy Too Vague

In response to recent reports regarding the possible institution of quotas on out-of-state admissions to MSU, the editorial board conducted an inquiry to find out just what the present admissions policy is and what changes are to be made in the near future.

A startling fact seems to have appeared: either there is no specific policy followed by the administration or a few officers, or administrators are willing to describe it or allow themselves to be quoted on it. In either case, there is a definite problem to be considered in the attitude of the university toward admitting quotas and toward out-of-state students.

First, the possibility that there is a definite policy would involve an established; if flexible, quotas on the number of beginning out-of-state students, particularly those from the five states recently mentioned.

The most concrete fact that is readily given is that an approximate ratio of 10 per cent of out-of-state students to 10 per cent Michigan students is being achieved by each freshman class. It is admitted that minimum requirements for students from more populous areas are higher than for those from some lesser, less populous states. It is also admitted, although less candidly, that New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, and Connecticut are "not doing enough for public education" in the opinion of the administration, and hence their students must meet higher standards in order to be admitted to the university, thus causing a province of their "deprived" students. The goal, it appears, is to achieve a somewhat equal distribution of students from all parts of the nation.

There is some justification for this policy. These states are not providing sufficient educational facilities for their large populations, it is felt, and Michigan state institutions cannot be expected to bear the burden of providing them with substitutes.

In spite of this, the uneven admissions policy raises the question of the University's image as an educational institution. Evidently, students from Michigan are expected to feel that Michigan State in a tough school and must get in and are to think of this university as their only applicability here, while states other from areas in which MSU is not as popular as its requirements for high school graduates may be given the idea that any student meeting minimum requirements will be admitted, so that the goal of geographic distribution can be reached.

This can lead to a dangerous policy to follow, if indeed this policy is being followed, and can, in the long run, mean a diminution of the admission standards in the less populous states.

Kennedy Building: Which One?

J. F. K. and the ignore the possibility of giving symbolism of giving Kennedy the tallest building.

What better way to keep alive the memory of Kennedy's basic philosophies than by having MSU's international projects for him? The late President's international contributions were as impressive as his domestic ones.

In the long run, the Kennedy Building is certain to be a 12-story structure, as the student population will be housed there, and the library will be among the uppermost floors.

The problem of book loss by students, in its various forms, was the topic of a study conducted by the University Library in connection with the installation of a new access system. The data were collected and analyzed by the University Library's Access Systems Department.

Cappers Top Buckeyes

The Spartan basketball team, apparently lacking little go-

In the second period, failed by 11 points in the first half of play, fell apart in the too much shooting, missed back in the first and second halves of the second period, finishing the game with only 1 point. The Buckeyes took over 16 points, completing the final score of the last half of the game.

Climbing the leader bracket, the game ended with 13 points, putting the Buckeyes in the lead, but it just wasn't enough as the Buckeyes pulled up their game and went back to the end of the game.

The Buckeyes' season will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, February 10, 1964, at the Fieldhouse in Washington, D.C., against the Boston College Eagles.

DEVELOPMENT OF MANAGEMENT IS OUR MOST IMPORTANT FUNCTION

At the 1963 stockholders' meeting, Arey R. Miller, President of Ford Motor Company, emphasized the Company's intensified recruitment program and its emphasis on developing management talent. "Obviously, our long-term future will be determined by the development of our management. Here, every one of our top levels of supervision must recognize this as his prime responsibility. Since 1940, the Company has recruited widely graduated talent, talent that can be trained to give us the required combinations of right administration and creative scope.

"For a carefully considered management development program, we try to provide the best personal available, both in training and experience. Once we get them, we have a program for giving them varied opportunities and increasing responsibility. This program is in the interest of all parts of the Company—in manufacturing, finance, engineering and marketing.

"The program is panning out. We have now achieved and depth of management talent after an absence of management talent for so long. The Company has been fortunate in being able to achieve this, but not only very fortunate in being associated with good men, but also very confident of its long success. We know our goals and how to achieve them."
