Despite the threat of Viet Nam's air force, South Vietnamese authorities were certain that this was not the last coup attempt.

It Should Have Been Told

The problem of managed news, one of the 1944-type aspects of life in a technological culture, appears to have found its way to the MSU campus. The administration should be proud of students who have found one more way to accustom students to modern life -- by introducing them to censorship at the earliest possible date.

We are talking about administration which is using every possible vehicle to inculcate, in every possible manner, the incredible activities of the MSU "key club" system. The club was founded with a way to make master keys to many important campus buildings. More incredible than the fact that this could happen at a supposedly well-orga nized university is that it happened almost a year and a half ago and wasn't revealed until this week.

In a spirit of blissful innocence and heartwarming trust in human nature, the administration nearly a year ago allowed three students who were caught taking part in the plot to remain in the school as they wished and remain at school.

These students weren't as innocent as the administration, however, and were clever enough to hold on to some of their keys as well as to withhold names of other students who were working with them.

The big question is -- why wasn't the news of the book-printing plot revealed for public consumption at the same time it was discovered?

If students had been informed of the plot before it locked up classrooms, married housing apartments and dormitory rooms behind bars, they might have taken measures to prevent further instances of breaking and entering.

Among the most serious instances of breaking and entering are those in which key club groups to watch for unauthorized people entering at night.

If students had been alerted to look for people with counterfeit keys they might have been able to help prevent the plots.

Yes, America, there really is a problem that this could happen at a supposedly well-administered campus, but M S U - corps men or students might have been able to help prevent the plots.

The administration near ly never accounts for at least one, the University of Michigan.

managed news is one of the few cases that are appearing in the world we seem to be approaching, but its dangers are equally present and equally treacherous today.

SEC Sets A Fine Example

It was a Saturday afternoon last fall and the Michigan Daily was in its office, George Romney and David Gottlieb, associate professors of education in philosophy, were talking. Other Michigan colleges and universities may be asked to develop similar programs which will provide a fine example of the SEC's Student Education Corps.

The governor's interest in the program has been so apparent that this worthwhile program can be spread to areas of the state which the SEC cannot reach.

Some colleges and universities should follow SEC's lead and get programs of their own going. At least one, the University of Michigan, is doing it.

SEC-type programs could be of real benefit to nearly every community college which is spread out in these areas because of distances involved.

Nearby city in Michigan of any size has a community college, but M S U - corps men or students might be able to give help to those in their own communities.

Perhaps the end result will be adoption of a proposed "domestic peace corps" to serve all states, but Michigan educators should not be lured into thinking that SEC can provide help to other schools in organizing programs but, rather, is a guide to help students at other institutions to take the initiative of offering services as M S U students have done.

If students had been alerted to look for people with counterfeit keys they might have been able to help prevent the plots.

Officials Examine Recent Viet Coup

WASHINGTON — Washington was weary yesterday of the South Viet­ namese leadership Thursday and sought to learn how much damage has been done to the nation’s effort to end the war against Red guerrillas.

President Johnson conferred by telephone with Secretary of State范文工 several times, the White House said, but beyond the fact that the advice of the leaders was desired, the White House released no other details.

At the State Department, officials were studying the reports of Washington’s top envoy to the region. He was not identified, but the Associated Press said he was the ambassador of the Republic of Vietnam, Mrs. John H. Shaw, who is in charge of the Economic Mission in Saigon.

The Vietnamese official was expected to bring reports to Washington that the situation in South Viet­ nam is “serious and fluid.”

The White House said that Mr. Johnson did not receive reports on the coup itself. He was not, therefore, aware that General Nguyen Khanh, a former general in the army of Premier Ngo Dinh Diem, had been named head of the new government.

The coup appeared to come as a shock to the United States and to all of Asia. The United States had been a strong supporter of Mr. Diem’s regime and had provided him with economic and military aid.

The coup was expected to bring new economic and military aid to the new government, but it was not clear how much aid would be given.

The coup was also expected to bring new military and economic aid to the United States, but it was not clear how much aid would be given.

"Glorious!" Groundhog Coming Talk Series

"Although for most Americans Ground Hog Day passes with little notice, there are still a few groups determined to preserve the veneration of the February second celebration."

"The oldest ground-hog observing club is the Punxutawney Ground-Hog of Pennsylvania, founded in 1898, but it is rivaled by the scornful Slumbering Ground-Hog Lodge of Quarryville, long fur coats, swallowtails, or togas to observe the emergence of rage—"

"Although the weather bureau claims the groundhog has been right only 28% of the time during the last 60 years, faithful members of groundhog clubs assert the woodchuck has been at least more accurate than the weather.

Spartan trackmen will join 900 more entries in the 100-meter dash, the 1,500-meter run, the 880-yard run, the 880-yard medley, and the 440-yard medley. The meet will be held on the MSU campus in East Lansing.

What Coach Charlie Schmitz calls "the toughest opener in 10 years" confronts the Spartans when they meet with Air Force Academy, UCLA and the University of Michigan at 1 p.m. today. The Spartans, who are defending NCAA champions, have never won a conference title. The meet will be held at the University of Michigan at 1 p.m. today.

How Good Are Nators? Answer May Come Saturday

The fencing opener is nearly a month old, but for MSU, there's no next match in sight. The Spartans, after "a two-week layoff," will have to be prepared for a full afternoon of bouting. "If anybody is surprised, we could be hurting," MSU Captain Sherm Lewis said.
