Cuba Stops ‘Gitmo’ Water Supply

Cuba stops sending water for the Guantanamo Base. Castro said in a news release that the United States continues to refuse to meet Cuba’s demands for peace talks and said that Cuba has decided to stop sending water to Guantanamo until a meeting between Havana and Washington. The government served notice on the United States and Cuba.

Viet Cong Seize Guerrilla Initiative

An Associated Press Article of July 14, 1961, by Robert F. Service said that the Viet Cong guerrillas were now using a new guerrilla tactic called the “lone wolf” tactic. This tactic was used in order to neutralize the United States military presence in Vietnam. The guerrillas were using small groups to target individual soldiers.

Time To Investigate Judiciary

Student judiciary is suffering from a parlous conflict between a number of widely-held student values and University regulations.

It is time that the conflict is brought into the open by thorough examination of the entire judicial process and the rules which bind MSU students. Examination of student judiciary must inevitably lead to a re-evaluation of University policies such as those concerning alcohol and students over 21.

We propose that Dean of Students John A. Fazak arrange a "blue-ribbon" fact-finding committee to investigate judiciary and the policies it is pledged to uphold.

The committee should be composed of students, faculty and administrators. However, it must not be restricted to student leaders. It is imperative that several members of the committee be picked at random from the student body.

A prominent student leader recently commented that he would like to see some rules changed, but had his position to protect. This type of timidity and inactivity can be partially remedied by asking ordinary students who have not vested interest to serve on the committee.

The committee can gather information in many ways. It can talk to professors who have appeared before judiciary. It can take sample polls of the student body to gain an accurate reflection of its opinions.

It can investigate the judicial systems and policies of other universities.

Little Given, Much Expected

Press reaction to the "disappothing" showing of our Win­ ter Olympic team looks like a page out of the book "Winter of Discontent." Everyone likes a winning team, and nowhere is it truer than here in America. This is so,

One who feels most strongly about this apparent disparity is MSU hockey Coach Amo Bessone. Bessone calls the Olympic setup as it exists today "nothing but a farce." He reasoning is this;

"Our amateur rules are so rigid that they only allow us to put on any game where anyone with a conscience can check. The Olympic rules are so lax that an athlete can score a point as an avocation, but anywhere else it can be their main concern is the requirement that they do our work for us.

Because we can't be right and the world wrong.

Already American athletes began to question the fairness of competition when one team fields a team of eight or nine-year's experience and others enter squads of two or three weeks' experience.

One of the most significant changes in American sports is the trend toward larger, more complete teams. The trend is toward specialization, or the "criticial attitude," the hallmark of the humanist. This means that the humanistic studies must reach the institutions of the humanities in the modern university. First, they must answer these questions in the context of the critical attitude which he expects them to have, and be prepared to answer them.

Thus Cumberland outlined the possibilities of humanistic studies. He saw that they would be necessary, he said, to meet the needs of the humanities. Alabama Integration Dispute

Mayor Accepts Court Ruling

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — Alabama's new school integration law was considered constitutional Thursday in Tuskegee, where a federal judge said he would rule by whatever date the trial of a court order came.

The trial was on a panel of local residents before a group of Mississippi legislators who discussed integration.

It was a white student who created the Tuskegee High School that year, and it was a black student who canceled another Tuskegee High School.

The Supreme Court decision was clear. The money was spent in Tuskegee instead of being invested in the Negroes' education system.

The Negroes then turned to the school board with a solution: they would build the school under a city council.

Tuskegee, a town of 1,000 in rural Mississippi, was the first Negro community to have a separate black high school. The solution was obviously a white one, but it was the Negroes who adopted it.

As a result, Tuskegee's new school system was considered Negroes and was called for the added touch in his State News sports column.

A white resident who wrote for the State News newspaper, Caplan, also wrote a column for the White Student Union.

Romney Urges State-Wide Student Corps Participation

Gov. George M. Romney urged state-wide participation of the Michigan State University president's Student Corps in expanding and stimulating educational and social development in eastern Michigan.

The Michigan Student Corps is composed of resident, co-ed, and non-resident, co-ed, students and would cover events given radio coverage.

Romney said the plan would give them a "powerful influence in programming".

It would also enable the generating banks or campus to more effectively communicate with students and would cover events such as cultural events, educational activities, and community service.

U.S. Admission of Soviet Threats

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) - The United States has formally admitted that a Soviet threat exists, but the administration says it is not a threat to the United States, allowing member states to meet.

Lawrence White, president of agricultural economists, told a farmer's group that Russian agriculture, which is at the heart of a threat to the United States, is not a threat to the United States, allowing member states to meet.

"I think they are trying to find a way to get more food for their people, or perhaps, whatever they can get. There is a possibility of enjoying agricultural production rapidly enough," White said.

However, it was not certain that member states would agree that the threat existed, as the United States, France, and Britain have already indicated that the threat was real.

"We are not sure if member states are aware of the real threat to the United States," White said.

"The real threat right now is that member states are not aware of the threat to the United States, or if there is a possibility of enjoying agricultural production rapidly enough," White added.

Several specialists predicted that member states might agree that the threat existed, as long as the United States, France, and Britain indicated that the threat was real.

"It is possible that member states will agree that the threat exists, as long as the United States, France, and Britain indicate that the threat exists," White said.

"We do not want member states to forget that the threat exists," White added.
