Two States To Follow Court Rule

A proposed court rule that would have required states to adopt a uniform system of selecting legislative districts was adopted in both Georgia and New Jersey. The rule, which was proposed by the National Conference of State Legislatures, would require states to select legislative districts in a way that would result in districts that are substantially equal in population. This would exclude a role for political considerations in the selection of legislative districts. The rule was adopted in both states by a vote of 2 to 1.

Buses Receive Tax Relief Of $25,000

Employee Wages Up 11 Cents; City To Buy Fuel Tax-Free

By Charles C. Wells

City News Staff Writer

MSU bus service will go on uninterrupted because wage disputes between local drivers and the Lansing Suburban Lines have been settled.

The strike was scheduled for 12:15 p.m. Wednesday and would have left the Lansing area without bus service.

Some 8,000 local patrons use the line daily.

Agreements were reached between Lansing Suburban Lines and the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations (AFL-CIO) after a 10-hour bargaining session at the Lansing City Council meeting on Tuesday night.

The city agreed to purchase fuel tax-free for the MSU system, which saves the city and MSU money. The city also expects a return on its investment.

"The company has been negotiating for a tax-free contract for quite some time," said Rep. Allison Green, R-Kingsport.

Lesson From A Governor

Several State News staff members learned an important lesson in human relations during the week. The lesson is not one of the usual type that appear on this page.

Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama happened to be passing through Chicago at the same time six staffers were there and granted them an audience.

That a man dedicated to principles which to many of us are antiquated and inhuman could also be a personable gentleman was a surprise to us. It is, we think, an important lesson.

As Jackie Korona points out in the larger article, it is largely a mere chance of geography and sociological conditions that Gov. Wallace is the segregatist and the integrationist. He can no more help his background than we can help ours.

But the fact remains that Gov. Wallace is a southerner, and our southerners are a different breed from us. They have a different kind of logic. And as such a meeting is rare, it is a good idea to see how our neighbors think.

From many of the younger southerners we have met, we would like to ask an important question: Why did you join the National Guard? It may not have been one of the more important decisions you have made, but it is one that we hope you will think about. It is a decision which affects not only you but all of us. It is a decision which affects the future of America.

We went back to the governor's suite after the interview, turned on a television set and watched television with him. We felt again the separation of North and South. Wallace explained that he was in the morning.

We thought of East Lansing, of actually seeing communities in Michigan, of campus NAACP activities. It was a different order of thinking. We were left with the impression that there may be a way to do it. We hope the State News will be able to keep a firm grip on our backgrounds.

Wallace was a most refreshing, almost human, person to talk about the current racial situation. He was more interested in the problem and its solution than in the politics. He was more interested in the individual than in the group. He was willing to talk about the problems, not the politics.

We felt as if we had just had a juried exhibition of drawing, painting, or sculpture. Each of us had a chance to show what we had learned. Each of us had a chance to show what we had done.

We asked the governor about the Southern States and their schools. He said that he heard from unofficial sources that the Department of Education had complained about the quality of the schools. However, he said that he had personally observed the schools and had found them to be satisfactory.

Fordy Cites Seniors, Sophors

Although openly happy about the team's success this year, Coach Fordy had a word of caution for his seniors. "They're the backbone of the team," he said. "But they also need to be aware of their role in setting a good example for the younger players." Coach Fordy also praised the sophomores for their contributions. "They're showing a lot of promise," he said. "I'm really excited about their potential."
