State News Policy Explained

Reaction to Wednesday’s editorial and story about Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace points out that many State News readers do not understand the newspaper’s editorial policy.

First, editorials are written by editorial board members—editor-in-chief, campus editor, wire editor, sports editor, and editorial writers.

These views, on the left side of each page of the paper, are the board’s responsibility for these opinions lies either with the editor-in-chief or the editorial board members—the editorial writers.

Second, columns and stories appear elsewhere on the page, often with editorial writers as the names of the particular writers. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the editorial writers.

Third, the State News is an independent body within the University community—indeed, from the administration, faculty and student body. It is a University newspaper in that it is published for students attending the University for the purpose of disseminating news of interest and importance to its readers.

It is a student newspaper in that it is published by staff members who are students.

The newspaper publishes editorials and interpretative stories that reflect its own views and those of individual staff members.

In “Point of View” columns and letters to the editor, the newspaper deals with individuals in the University community.

We are not censored or controlled by any group—including students.

Library Funds Important

Library Director Richard Chapin and President John A. Hannah both made statements this week regarding the library’s current role.

Both said that a re-evaluation of the necessity of funds is under way at Hannah’s insistence. “We should find out what kind of library facilities the University should have.”

Both Chapin and Hannah, however, added that this was not the only key to library problems. Chapin went so far as to say that the fact that the library system permits students to borrow books from the library budget, to the Beatties of the library.

Opinions, which will appear in the editorial page “Point of View,” columns, should be typed, double-spaced and submitted to the editor at the State News office, 341 State Student Services.

We Want You!

Do you want to sound off with a “Point of View”? The State News offers space to members of the University community to air their views on events, situations, problems, and issues—from the campus to the international scene. These viewpoints are often humorous and serious. And they range from ‘good’ or ‘not so good’

Face Baby Boom Problem

American students who come from educated families are more likely to be enrolled in university than those who come from a working-class family. Mr. P. S. Jones, head of the department of educational research at the University of Alabama, believes that this is partly because there are more students from families who can afford to send their children to college.

Students who come from a working-class family, on the other hand, are more likely to have parents who are illiterate. This is partly because there are fewer working-class families who can afford to send their children to college.

Molière's "Miser" Wildly Different

By DOUG LACKER

The Arena Theatre has taken on the aspects of a magician's magic show in its staging of "Miser," with highly different movement and dramatic effects.

The setting is the office of the miserly old merchant Gudgeon, which is transformed by the movement of the audience into the office of the rich man and the decaying mouth of death, symbolizing the end of the miser's life. The stage is also used as a ghostly walkway, with the set at night and the audience at the center, and the lighting is used to create a sense of the supernatural and the afterlife.

The acting is also highly different, with the actors using exaggerated gestures and facial expressions to convey the characters' emotions. The pace of the show is also different, with the actors moving quickly from one scene to the next, and the dialogue is delivered in a rapid-fire manner.

Overall, the Arena Theatre's staging of "Miser" is a unique and highly different production, with a focus on movement, lighting, and the supernatural. It is a must-see for fans of Shakespeare and audience members looking for a new and different take on a classic.

On the Nature of Equality

Time and time again, a sage taught that battle between the sexes is a natural part of life. Indeed, it is a fight that has been waged throughout history. The struggle for equality is as old as the Earth itself.

As early as the days of ancient Greece, philosophers debated the nature of equality. Some argued that it was a natural state, while others believed it was an artificial construct imposed by societal norms.

In the 19th century, the fight for equality gained momentum. Women's rights activists fought for the right to vote, while civil rights leaders sought to end racial discrimination.

Today, the struggle for equality continues. It is a battle that affects every aspect of society, from education to employment to healthcare.

In the words of one of the greatest leaders of all time, Martin Luther King Jr., "If you are neutral in situations of immense moral import, you have chosen the side of those who are most in the wrong."

The fight for equality is not just a battle for the right to vote or equal pay. It is a battle for the right to be treated with respect and dignity, regardless of one's race, gender, or sexual orientation.

As we move forward, let us remember the words of Mahatma Gandhi, "The will to fight, the will to be free, the will to be equal."

Instructor Has Evidence Of Soviet Persecution

Evidence of suffering religious persecution in the Soviet Union has been uncovered by a team of investigators. The investigation, led by Peter K. Kriplean, director of the Southern Baptist Convention's Center for World and Missions, was conducted in nine Soviet republics, where evidence of religious persecution was found.

The investigators found that religious groups were being targeted by the Communist government, which seeks to control all aspects of life. The evidence includes restrictions on religious gatherings, confiscation of religious materials, and harassment of religious leaders.

The findings of the investigation are significant, as they provide evidence of the ongoing persecution of religious groups in the Soviet Union. The Southern Baptist Convention is calling on the international community to address this issue and ensure the freedom of religion for all.

The investigation was funded by a grant from the Southern Baptist Convention's Cooperative Program, which supports missions and outreach efforts worldwide.

The Southern Baptist Convention, the world's largest Southern Baptist denomination, is committed to sharing the Good News of Jesus Christ and supporting missions around the world. For more information, please visit www.sbc.net.

Hanna On Southeast Asia

New Values Create Unrest

The changing values in Southeast Asia have created situations that may have the potential for disaster. William Hanna, former U.S. government representative in the area, said that violence is a real possibility. "It is an area where values are changing, and the United States must face the challenge of working with the people of this region." Hanna also warned about the potential for conflict between the United States and the Soviet Union."The world must be prepared for a possible conflict between the two superpowers." Hanna urged美国和苏联 to work together to resolve the situation.

校园UN To Consider Cyprus Action

The general assembly of the UN will vote on a resolution to authorize a UN peacekeeping mission in Cyprus. The resolution is expected to be approved by a large majority. However, some countries, including the United States, are concerned about the potential for conflict in the region. "The situation in Cyprus is delicate," said a U.S. representative. "We are concerned about the potential for violence and we will work to ensure that a peaceful resolution is reached."}

Higbee Calls Exchanges Beneficial

International trade is "just a natural and logical extension of the American way of life," James H. Higbee, chairman of Higbee & Company, said Monday.

"It is the right time, right place and right conditions for a new policy," he said. "We have the opportunity to lead the world in this direction and to lead the world in the future." Higbee said that the United States is the largest producer of goods and services, and that the country is in a position to benefit from these exchanges.

He also emphasized the importance of education and training in preparing for this new world order.

"We need to educate our people to be able to work in these new industries," Higbee said. "We need to train our people to be able to think in terms of international trade."
