Modern Revolution Is Keynton's Topic

"Now that the time for the triumph of the last great revolutionary force in Africa, that of the urban Negro, has arrived, black people throughout the world will unite to create a new African Renaissance," said the University's president, Chesley Keynton, at the dedication of the new planetarium.

The building, which cost $250,000, has been designed as a place of assembly for the University's students and staff. It will be used for lectures, discussions, and meetings.

The $175,000 Planetarium, which will be available to students and faculty, is located on the campus.

Profs Doubt Total Value Of Tax Cut

The $2 billion tax cut recently authorized by the President is expected to bring about a 5% increase in the economy, according to Professor John J. Henderson, head of the Economics Department.

Weather

Friday, February 28, 1964

The day will be sunny with a high of 60 degrees, and temperatures will drop to 40 degrees at night.

Policy Defined on Interviews

A strategy of policy-making was outlined by President John J. Hannah, who said that the University would adopt a "new and modern approach to policy-making.

Hannah indicated that, in his view, the University's approach to policy-making should be based on the following principles:

1. The University should have a clear understanding of the issues involved.
2. The University should have a clear understanding of the consequences of its decisions.
3. The University should have a clear understanding of the impact of its decisions on the University and its constituents.

The committee has expressed concern about the condition of the University's housing facilities.

Plan For Academic Aid Proposed

A proposal has been made for the establishment of an academic aid program.

Group Studies Grade Policy

The proposal is based on the idea that grades should be based on the student's performance, rather than on the level of difficulty of the course.

Council To Hear Report

A hearing is scheduled for 2 p.m. to consider the proposal.

Suggests Help For Flunk-Outs

The proposal is expected to be adopted by the University's Board of Regents at its next meeting.

Advising Time Needed

The series of academic advising which ends today in State News points up some of the greatest dangers of a University's size increasing at a greater rate than the increase in facilities and faculty.

With the growth of the University, the needs of students for careful help in selecting and planning their programs go up, while the availability of advisers' time goes down. Not only are more students per faculty adviser, there are also more courses and ultimate open to the student which require greater care on the part of all concerned.

Most of the faculty members and students to whom the writer of this series has spoken have recognized the importance of careful advance planning of students' programs, along the lines of the pre-enrollment plan used by several colleges and departments.

As currently planned, pre-enrollment allows students to speak to their advisers shortly after the middle of the term preceding the one for which they are planning their schedule.

This provides several weeks for consideration of various programs and for worthwhile meetings between advisers and advisers.

The benefit of pre-enrollment is that it does not force students and faculty members to rush through the procedure of enrollment and registration entries within three or four days of each term. With the strain of meeting day-to-day problems of the semester, it is better to look for that thought planning is possible.

As it stands, making enrollment and registration a complete mechanical process, as some are suggested in other programs, would be more beneficial to provide the opportunity for personal counseling and the option of not consulting advisers for each course.

The extension of pre-enrollment to all colleges in the University would enable those students who feel they need advice to have it without much trouble, and would allow those students who need no help to get on their ways early and surely.

But Not For A While

WILLIAM F. PAUL, director of Lecture-Concert series, and University Secretary Jack Weinberger have raised the question of the shortage of auditorium facilities. Now that an additional gymnasium is in the offing, it seems that more dormitory space, more top-notch faculty, and more variety of presentations would fill the gap.

Before anyone knows it, the whole future of the University is to be decided. The dangers of a University's size increasing at a rate greater than the expansion of its facilities is a topic which ends in today's State News.

This Week’s Seniors

Friday, February 28, 1964

Each year, the University holds a special event to honor its seniors. The 1964 event featured a variety of performances and activities, including a dance, a concert, and a speech by the visiting president. The event was well-attended, with hundreds of students and faculty members coming together to celebrate the seniors’ achievements. The event was a memorable occasion for all who attended.
Walsh Says Profs Kept In 'Ivory Towers'

Recent events must be made into the social and political problems of the day before they are transformed into the philosophy of the future, historian David Walsh, professor of philosophy, said yesterday. Consequently, he said, society, Walsh spoke on the problem of academic freedom.

"Serious inquiry must be made without due consideration of more detrimental affects which may arise," said Walsh.

Senate To Investigate Title Fight Promotion

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., said yesterday his Senate anti-trust subcommittee, which is investigating the operations of the World Heavyweight Title Fight Promoters, Inc., will conduct hearings on the subject of the Proposition 96 fight scheduled for April 8 and 9.

"The subcommittee's hearing to be held in the livestock pavilion, Anthony Animal Industries Room, will be open to the public." said Walsh.

Matmen Host Two; Starters Doubtful

The last dual meet of the season between the host and, as usual, the visitors, is this week end. Michigan State will play Denver in the first match and Harvard in the second.

Steve McQueen, who was inducted two days earlier with the victims, thought he had something special going and moved in for a 6-4, 6-5 win in the top flight.

It was the last dual meet of the year for the Matmen. The Spartans who had defeated Ohio State and placed a score in the top flight at Madison, Wis., in February, came home 101 points, while Wisconsin netted 90 and last year's Illinois netted 70.

The Spartans began the evening in first style, chiefing a Harry Shlar Gordon in the first flight. Jim Garrett junior lost 6-2, 6-3.

Winning Record
‘S’ Goal

Since the past month under-pressurized, the Michigan State basketball team has been the top team in the Big Ten, but according to Coach Forddy Anderson, the Spartans are still not at the top. "We have a lot to prove," Anderson said. "We’re still not the best team in the Big Ten, but we’re definitely closing in." According to Anderson, the Spartans have been the most consistent team in the Big Ten, and he believes they have a good chance of winning the conference title. "We have the talent and the experience to do it," he said. "But we have to prove it on the court." The Spartans will have their chance to do that this weekend, as they host the University of Illinois at Carbondale. The Illini are currently ranked third in the Big Ten, but the Spartans are hoping to move ahead of them in the standings. "We’re looking forward to this game," Anderson said. "It’s a big opportunity for us to show what we can do." The Spartans have been strong defensively, holding their opponents to an average of 65 points per game. They have also been proficient offensively, averaging 75 points per game. "We have a balanced attack," Anderson said. "We have a lot of scoring options, and we’re not shy about taking shots." The Spartans will need to be at their best if they hope to defeat the Illini. "The Illini are a tough team," Anderson said. "They’re well-coached and they have a lot of experience. But we’re confident in our own abilities, and we’re ready to give it our all." The Spartans are hoping to continue their strong start to the season and climb to the top of the Big Ten standings. "We’re excited about the opportunity," Anderson said. "We’re looking forward to the challenge." The game is set for 7 p.m. at the Breslin Center. The Spartans are hoping for a strong home performance and are ready to take on the Illini. "We’re ready to go," Anderson said.
