The Publishing Imperative

"Publish or perish." This is the question which must face, as several faculty members have said in the State News series of today. The problem facing University instructors is whether or not to do original research in their fields. Thus, increasing the store of knowledge available and improving their own ability to touch the material. Publishing is merely the best way of aiding communications between members of separate faculties. The thought that professors waste time doing research and writing can not denote sufficient time to do their teaching duties. The question is whether or not the members of the community it serves. Research and publication are the only ways in which the University's leaders give it the character it should have as an intellectual center.

College Not an Orgy

This week's Newsweek magazine offers its readers a six-page spread on "The Moral Revolution on the U.S. Campus," guaranteed to panic parents and worry a grieving minority of students. Newsweek implies that college is one grand orgy. Newsweek is in the circulation of its rival Time magazine, which published a similar article last term. Newsweek implies that students spend more time in pursuit of a had partner than in an academic Exercise. The article equitably qualifies its accusations early in the story: "A university representative regarded this as a victory for most of today's 4.1 million college students..." Then it adds a confidential "...but" and slips its readers six pages of colorful quips from psychiatrists, sociologists, and college administrators and students. To quote a Newsweek quote: "...it's a load off my mind knowing my virginity," says one Vassar redhead. "Many girls feel inadequate if they're not having affairs." This quote—the entire article—easily distorts the public's image of the moral standards of the majority of college students. Newsweek failed to make clear that "the new morality" standards it describes are the lower standards of a majority and are grossly representative of the great majority of college students.

In a letter to the State News, Newsweek bemoans the story of a "serious probe into a sociological phenomenon in which, unfortunately, in their own way, as great an disarrangement negotiations or a presidential campaign." To us it appears that Newsweek decided to boost its sales with an exaggerated and sensationalized report, trying to lure back readers it may have lost to Time magazine and Time's winter-time view of U.S. morality.

Research Vital To Faculty

Research has become an important element to the professor at Michigan. This is especially true as the Honors College is being built up. A number of professors have commented that without the ability to research there is no way for the student to get the best results. Research is also important in the professional fields. The Michigan College of Social Work offers research opportunities for its members. The College of Arts and Sciences is also looking into research opportunities for its students.

Do You Always Take The Courses With The Shortest Waiting Times?

Lest you think that all the courses with the shortest waiting times are the easiest, think again. The courses with the shortest waiting times are often the courses that are offered the most. This is because the courses that are offered the most are the courses that are the most popular. This is not to say that all the courses with the shortest waiting times are easy. Some of them may be difficult. But if you are able to get into these courses, you are likely to be able to get a good grade in them.

Vits & Views Take-Over

The Vits & Views section of the Michigan State News has taken over. They are now using the same format and style as the Vits & Views section of the Daily Northwestern. The Vits & Views section of the Daily Northwestern is a popular section of the Daily Northwestern and has been running for many years. The Michigan State News has decided to take over this section to show that they are not afraid to take risks.

Ex-gridders Aid Duffy At Practice

Spartan football Coach Duffy Taggart may have set for pre-season practice in Health, Physical Education and Recreation, but it doesn't prevent him from employing some of the disciplines in the classroom. Although Allen Coach Mercer, the "father of student-athletes," is in place for a year with the Spartans, Taggart will still need the services and support of his coaching staff.

Spartan gridders, now in the pros, have been a source of inspiration for Taggart. "Spartan gridironers have been a part of my life since I was a child," he said. "They've had a profound influence on me, not only in terms of football, but also in terms of character and leadership." The jovial MSU head man is a graduate of Lansing Eastern High School and has been involved in the community ever since.
