Wanted: Jesse, James

The primary election for the All-University Student Government presidency will be held to-day.

The State News advocates the candidacy of James Jesse for this office and advises students to vote for him both today and in the final election Thursday.

More than the other four candidates, has demonstrated enthusiasm and concern for the problems and workings of AUSG. Moreover, he announced last weekend a plan for a sweeping reform of AUSG's operations and constitution which would encompass reorganization of the student government next year.

In doing so, he has given the respect which have plagued earlier candidates and may be an asset in running AUSG.

We attempt at all times to study every matter of importance to the University and present what the editorial board feels is a reasonable and workable solution to each problem.

In this case, we have studied the five platforms which have been put forth and have found one man to be more qualified and more practical than the others.

Our support of him is meant as the result of a careful consideration of the use of editorial influence in the support of candidates for student government.

We feel that if we refrained from taking a stand on one or any other important issue, we would not be meeting our obligation to serve the University and express a concern for the successful solution of campus problems.

Editor's Note: The following is the first of a four-part series on the University's projects in Nigeria. It is written by an associate professor in the department of economics, John P. Henderson, who is now completing a year at the University of Lagos.

New University Grows In Nigeria

The town itself emerged as a settlement about 50,000, and seat of government for the University of Nigeria, Enugu State. The university, teaching agriculture, education, and engineering for the development of Nigeria, was given an open housing ordinance in 1964.

Aiding the Library

All department heads in the University have been sent questionnaires by the Provost's office asking for suggestions regarding improving the Library's service in the crucial ten years just ahead.

This is an opportunity for all library authority to make proposals for improving library service in accordance with predictions for future needs in each department.

In the event you do propose to answer the miss the opportunity to suggest improvements in the most vital segment of University facilities.

Robertson has been a vocal supporter of the cause and has promised to work for an open housing ordinance in East Lansing.

Our support of him is meant as the result of a careful consideration of the use of editorial influence in the support of candidates for student government.

Wallace, Partridge Add To Campaign Platforms

The candidates for the all-University Student Government Senate will add new plans to their platforms.

Bob Wallace, Medical Education junior, told a small group at Student Hall Wednesday night that he has added new planks to his platform.

Wallace, who is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity, also announced a special committee of the student government associations that would work to make the changes.

Wallace said that he did not completely support the program of James Buchanan, Junior College history major, but he expected the two would work together.

“Whenever we see people problems throughout the country, we should work together,” Wallace said.

Wallace said he would be in charge of the new committee, which would consist of two people from each of the major University clubs and a representative from each of the student government associations.

Wallace said the committee would work to improve student services, make the university more responsive to student needs, and provide a forum for the discussion of student issues.

Wallace said he was concerned about the lack of student representation in the university administration and the need for more student input in decision-making processes.

Wallace said he would work to ensure that the student government associations have a voice in the university’s decision-making process.

Wallace said he would also work to improve the student services, such as counseling, health services, and academic support.

Wallace said he was also concerned about the need for more diversity in the student body and the university’s response to diversity issues.

Wallace said he would work to ensure that the university’s policies and practices are inclusive and equitable for all students.

Wallace said he was also concerned about the need for more transparency in the university’s decision-making processes.

Wallace said he would work to ensure that the university’s decisions are made with the input of all stakeholders, including students, faculty, and staff.

Wallace said he was also concerned about the need for more accountability in the university’s decision-making processes.

Wallace said he would work to ensure that the university’s decisions are held accountable for their impact on students, faculty, and staff.

Wallace said he was also concerned about the need for more resources for the student government associations.

Wallace said he would work to ensure that the university provides adequate resources for the student government associations to effectively represent the interests of students.

Wallace said he was also concerned about the need for more training for the student government associations.
