Cambodian Jets Attack Viet Troops

Incident Complicates Anti-Communist War

McNamara Reviews Outlook, Reaffirms American Assistance

SAIGON, Viet Nam—A new incident on the Cambodian frontier complicated South Vietnam's anti-Communist war Tuesday while Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara reviewed the general American security guard in Saigon.

Reliable sources said two Cambodian jet fighters zipped across the border, bombed and strafed Vietnamese infantrymen who were then pulled back from Communist artillery fire and then had their attackers under fire from the infantrymen.

There were no Vietnamese fatalities, the officials said, and it was not determined whether the planes were of the A-11 type. The clash occurred near Tay Ninh, a border post 30 miles south of Saigon.

Saigon, McNamara's special envoy in the region, was a Southern Vietnamese official who had been described as a government informant and his saucer-shaped F-105s. The planes were reported to have been 50 yards from the border.

The clash occurred Monday afternoon after the South Vietnamese had been shown to the American forces that the planes had been fired on at the border.

American military experts said the Cambodian planes were not likely to be the A-11s used in the incident because the A-11s are not armed with rockets that are commonly used to strafe ground targets.

The planes were reported to have been 50 yards from the border. The planes were reported to have been 50 yards from the border.

Needless Limitation

The MSU Board of Trustees limited the choice of June’s commencement speaker to non-political figures in this election year.

University policy apparently is intended to avoid any controversy and criticism that might result if a political speaker were made available to students at this state-supported school.

During the last three presidential election years, only one political figure has given the commencement speech. In June, 1960, former President Harry S. Truman spoke.

While MSU worries about upsetting legislators downtown and a few taxpayers in the state, the University of Michigan—also a state-supported school—is taking advantage of increased interest in politics and government, with elections six months away.

President Lyndon B. Johnson will address the U-M graduating class Friday.

University Only, Please

An MSU student and his girl, with blanket, picnic lunch and portable radio under arm, head for the canoe shelter, looking forward to a relaxing afternoon at the shelter. He is planning to catch a bass, and she plans to listen to a baseball game.

Even adding more canoes will not solve the problem. As long as non-University people can canoe at all, 65 cents an hour, students will be sitting and waiting on those cement steps.

We’re willing to bet a canoe ride to the IMDb Bridge that there are enough canoe enthusiasts among those 24,850 students and employees of the University to fill the shelter and keep the shelter open, especially in the evenings and on weekends.

Overseas Growth

Negotiations are underway for the establishment of four overseas projects, which will form a growing international program.

Turkey, Argentina, Guatemala and Thailand have been chosen for the projects, three widely-separated nations with different needs and different problems.

Michigan State educators, if the plans go through, will have the chance to help the people of those areas help themselves. This will make a total of 12 MSU overseas projects currently in operation under this philosophy.

Each step forward in the overseas program is a step forward for the University in helping American prestige and effectiveness abroad, and is another proof of MSU’s growing interest and importance in national and international affairs.

Red Cedar Report

By Jim DeForest

About 100 students had a few hours before classes began. Some spent the time studying, others spent it playing chess, doing homework, or just hanging out.

The administration has just announced that they’re going to move the bell up here to MSU, so they can’t do that anymore.

If people had headaches after studying, they’d eat a chocolate bar.

We doubt that the Michigan State University Department of Television is going to solve the world’s problems, but it will help students to understand the world better.

The department has a two-year curriculum designed to give students an introduction to television production and management.

Students will learn about the technical aspects of television, such as camera operation, editing, and sound production, as well as the business aspects of the industry, including finance, sales, and marketing.

The department also offers a minor in television studies, which includes courses in television history, criticism, and theory.

Students interested in pursuing a career in television production or management should consider enrolling in the department.

Pakistan Still Seeking Image

Pakistani is still a new country trying to find its image...A part of the Republic of India, which is a member of the United Nations, has been seeking its own identity, and the world is watching and waiting. Pakistan, the world is interested in knowing about its progress, its people, its problems, and its potential. Pakistan is a land of vast resources, and it has the opportunity to develop into a major economic power. However, Pakistan still needs help in finding its image, and the world must work together to make it happen. Pakistan needs more help in finding its image.
