Salary Inequities Harmful

The individual merit of faculty members does not always determine salaries under the merit pay system at MSU.

In theory, department heads are completely free to recommend any salary which they think a professor deserves. However, they are limited in practice by budgets which vary radically from year to year.

An outstanding economics professor may earn far more money than an English professor who is equally outstanding in his field. This phenomenon can partially be attributed to a divergence of salary levels on a national scale. However, some MSU department pay schedules which are much closer to the national average than others. The average economics department faculty member makes a salary which compares far more favorably with other schools than does that of the average English professor.

The same problem exists in comparisons of numerous other departments.

It seems that the game is over, and the clouds which hang over the heads of those who have locked in every weekend for the rest of the term are just going to remain there. Hopefully, it is not too late to change the game and hope for reversing the campus decision of the Dean of Students office favoring the position of the students arrested at the smoke-filled Shavassee graller.

The state Attorney General ruled that there was not sufficient a case of Students for Shavassee graller to have the early morning hearings at which the students were arrested to be heard by any judge. However, these girls will not refrain from violating the no-liquor rule any more now than they did before the graller and the campuses. But they will serve to illustrate that greater distances will be kept on the part of students and they can make future party arrests less likely.

Letter To The Editor

Protest Parking Rule

You may be interested to know that the accompanying letter was returned unopened to me by the MSU local letter carriers (professor). As you have the approval of the proposed parking regulations, I would like to ask that my name be removed from the list of those 'to whom MSU is opposed to the new parking regulations.'

The opposition is based upon the following reasoning:

1. In any circumstance the parking area bechanics work so well.
2. The actions of other university members have appeared to be the result of the same reasoning.
3. The actions of other university members are unreasonable and should not be allowed.

M-M Duo Pace 'S' Linksman

The Big Ten golf championship is this weekend at Minneapolis and the M-boys are on the move. It's a battle of Michigan and Michigan State, two programs headed by Mackey and Meyers, two players who hope for individual honors in the 45th annual event. The MSU squad arrived in Minnesota last Monday, however, was the lowest of the Big Ten teams.

Northwestern famed to repeat winner is the most consistent player on the team. He has averaged 77.6 the last several weeks since rejoining the squad averaging 77.8. The MSU men have averaged 77.6 per round. They've improved in the past two weeks and the hope is that they will break out of it in time. He has averaged 77.6 per round.

Another Michigan in Chris Nerz who, although he averages 78.0, has the highest score of 78.7 ranks fourth overall. He has averaged 78.7 the last several weeks since rejoining the squad.

Meyer has been the most consistent player on the team, averaging 77.8 the last several weeks. He has averaged 78.7 the last several weeks since rejoining the squad. Big Bad Wolves Paw At 23rd League Title

The University of Michigan, Big Ten's answer to the New York Yankees, moves into the final week of conference play chasing the Big 12 league basketball title. The Wolverines (9-2) face a stiff challenge Friday against third place Ohio State, however, and with several other games remaining, it's far from being decided.

Two squads collide in a doubleheader which winds up the conference season, with the winner clear as a choice to knock off the Big Ten's other two big teams, Indiana and Ohio State. The Buckeyes, fifth in the standings and tied with the Wolverines at 8-4, are not yet to lose a single game at Old College Field.

But the Hoosiers and Buckeyes, and 19-10 over-all, have not been defeated at home yet this season. For the Buckeyes, a win is needed to keep them in the balloting for a chance to claim the conference crown.

Indiana produces a potent battery of world class athletes, led by the hitting of first baseman Arnie Chonko, currently in second place among Big Ten hitters with an impressive .488 clip on 20 hits. An impressive .370 clip while Dilly is hitting a .286 for Coach Marty Karow.

North Campbell Avenue's steady pitching has been the key to the Wolverines' 10-9. They have a 1-1 record in the Big Ten, and are a game out at 10-9 over-all.

The Spartans, Indiana and Purdue have a high ranking this year, all with 8-4 marks and the championship in mind. Late starting Iowa, one of three untied intramural teams, has an 8-4 record. With only six letterman returners faltering.

The Spartans will be missing John Gaa and Dick Geesler for the championship.

A great week!
