Congo Rebels Delay Execution

LEONARD BURNE, The Associated Press

The execution of U.S. Missionary Frank Carlsen, Wednesday was postponed until Monday pending further investigation by rebel leaders after Christopher Geuze was chopped in the heart.

A broadcast from the rebel camp in the neighboring Congo, heard in Nairobi, Kenya, and the news release from the rebel headquarters last week, in which the rebels said the Nyanza executive of the council on the rebel's agreement to have Geuze chopped in the heart.

The decision to chop in the heart, Kenya, was made in the last minutes of negotiations over the current stalemate of the cabinet.

A broadcast from the rebel camp in the neighboring Congo, said the rebels have a decision to have Geuze chopped in the heart.

Geuze, a 57-year-old American, is the rebel's financial advisor, who was in charge of the Nyanza executive at the moment of the rebel's decision to have Geuze chopped in the heart.

The rebels said last week that they would not appeal the decision to have Geuze chopped in the heart.

Dem Supports Tax Reform

Dr. LINDA MILLER
State News Staff Writer

Editor: "I would support tax reform in general, because it's important for economic growth. However, I don't think this specific proposal is the best approach."

The All-University Student Government reevaluation committee has raised several questions concerning the functions of AUSG which would have been asked of AUSG if it had been designed in 1968.

The committee has raised questions concerning the functions of AUSG which would have been asked of AUSG if it had been designed in 1968. These questions concern the effectiveness of AUSG in serving the needs of the student body, and the need for greater accountability and transparency in AUSG's operations.

Arms Race: A Disaster

By TONY VON Demula of The Daily Telegram

The Arms Race is a disaster.

I think the state should do more to curb this arms race. We can't keep on spending billions on weapons when the money could be better spent on other things.

Student Suicides Rise alarmingly According To Report Issued By NEA

By Pam Jameson

The number of students who committed suicide during the past year has increased significantly, according to a recent report issued by the National Education Association (NEA). The report indicates that suicide rates have doubled in the past decade, with the majority of deaths occurring among college and university students.

Why are there more college suicides? The report cites a number of factors, including the stress of academic pressure and the pressures of the job market. It also notes that the trend is most pronounced in younger college students, particularly those who are majoring in science, business, and engineering.

Indeed, the report states that the trend is most pronounced in younger college students, particularly those who are majoring in science, business, and engineering.

The report also notes that suicide prevention programs are needed to address the issue. It recommends that schools implement comprehensive suicide prevention programs, including education and awareness campaigns, crisis intervention services, and suicide prevention hotlines.

A comprehensive suicide prevention program developed by the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI) includes the following components:

- Education and awareness campaigns to increase public awareness of suicide and to reduce the stigma associated with mental illness.
- Crisis intervention services to provide immediate assistance to those in crisis and to prevent suicide attempts.
- Suicide prevention hotlines to provide confidential and immediate support to those in crisis.

The report concludes that suicide prevention programs can save lives and prevent unnecessary suffering. It calls on schools to take action to address the issue of student suicide.
Injury Ends McCormick’s Career

The Plight Of Spartan Quarterbacks

By JERRY MORTON
State News Sports Writer

Michigan State University has had its share of injuries in recent years, and in 1966 it was the quarterbacks who sustained the most damage. This was a significant setback for the Spartans, as they tried to compete in the Big Ten Conference.

The starting quarterback, Steve Juday, was out for most of the season with an injury, and his replacement, Mike Proebstle, suffered a broken leg. The backup quarterback, Dick Mullen, also missed several games due to injuries.

The Spartans were forced to rely on their backup quarterbacks, Proebstle and Mullen, for the remainder of the season. Despite their efforts, Michigan State struggled to find consistent play at the quarterback position and finished the season with a losing record.

Frosh Gridmen Unite On Old Battleground

Frosh Gridmen at Michigan State University have united over the old battlegrounds of the State. Their efforts and support are now being focused on the most important goal of the season: to defeat the Michigan State University football team. At the beginning of the season, the Frosh team was considered a dark horse, but their performances have proven them to be a formidable opponent. Their tactics and strategies have been modeled on the most effective methods used by the Michigan State University team. The Frosh team has been led by Coach Jack Fitz, who was also a key player in the Michigan State University team. Under his guidance, the Frosh team has been able to develop a unique and effective playing style. The Frosh team's potential for victory has been recognized by sports analysts, who predict that they will pose a serious challenge to the Michigan State University team.
