Labor Head Will Retire

Labor Commissioner Roy Johns, under fire from Democrats as the most ineffective in the operation of the Labor Department, said today he plans to retire in July. Johns, appointed by a joint House-Senate conference committee to investigate alleged strikes, has failed to keep pace with the rapid rise in membership of the union.

Future plans were expressed April 30, and the Democratic party has been urging Johns to stay in his job. It is reported that Johns has been asked to consider resigning.

"When I first took this job," he said, "I didn't have any right to join, or not to join, as I saw fit." He added, "That doesn't prevent us from talking about the unions, or about any questions of interest to the public."

The question of whether or not the government should have a right to dissolve strikes, and to bring them to an end, is being asked to give up all thought of the right to strike. He explained that Dorothy Judd, chairwoman of the Michigan Civil Service Commission, recently sided with non-strikers "receiving their rights in court." The commission now is considering a court order that orders the state to renounce something we don't have.

The meeting is to be held in the Kellogg Center lobby, the week of April 5. Enrollments can be made at the Kellogg Center lobby. The series will begin the week of April 5 and continue through the week of April 11.

POLL BACKS VIET POLICY

Seven out of ten of the 730 MSU students polled were against the war in Vietnam. Sigmund Nosow, professor of social science, reported on a survey of 750 students early in the spring. Although the survey was not scientifically conducted, and was repeated in 12 social science classes, Nosow believed that the results were an indication of the general student opinion.

The survey asked two questions: 'If you were the US President, would you favor invasion of the north Vietnamese mainland to wipe out Chinese nuclear installations?' Seventy percent of the freshmen and sophomores said yes. When asked: 'do you favor immediate negotiation for an end to the war?' Eighty-four percent said yes.
