Spring is here. You can tell because the Red Cedar is flowing faster. The ducks on the lagoon look happy, and so do the young children walking hand-in-hand under the trees. The trees are looking better, too, as they shoot out bunches of light green buds. The trees are looking better, too, as they shoot out bunches of light green buds. A new wave of growth is happening in the Michigan State University's library.

The brain of a research library is its record. Richard Chapin, he puts on a show of managing, information, or a repository of research information and contact information. Thus his style of management creates two major problems: the management of large amounts of information and the management of the people who handle it. There are many problems, but the main one seems to be that no one knows how to manage the information properly. The library's catalog is not very adequate, and the poor cataloging makes it impossible to find anything you're looking for.

We give the administration our most sincere thanks and congratulations on their efforts to improve the library's service. The library is a place where people come to look for information. The library normally isn't a place for impulse selection, nor is it a place where people can go in and see what is happening and still see the libraries' collection. New Coach Veteran of Missouri Valley

S. LARRY NOOGE
State News-Sports Writer

A new Chapter of the Big Ten has been opened in Missouri Valley with John Benington as its star coach. Benington is a former University of San Francisco, a team that was coached by Pete Newell.

When Newell moved on to take the head coaching job here in 1960, Benington was left as the assistant. He is suspected he will bring along his present assistant, Sonny Means, one-time coach at Drake.

Munn took two key things into consideration in hand-picking Benington as his successor. "The first thing was his past accomplishments," said Munn. "He was a successful coach at Drake, and his record is most impressive." In his nine years at Drake and St. Louis, Benington teams compiled a record of 139-99.

"The second thing that he brings to the job is his experience," said Munn. "He is a veteran of the Big Ten, and he knows how to handle himself in the pressure-cooker that is college basketball." Benington is currently coaching his team at Drake, and he plans to continue his successful coaching career at Missouri Valley.
