Farmer, Ferency To Join Teach-In On Civil Rights

By MICHAEL KINDMAN

Michigan State News Staff Writer

Farmer, national director of the Programs, said the hearing will concern three issues:

1. The administration’s position that only students from a religious group can hold a hearing. Farmer said the notification list should be published.

2. The administration’s support for the Jesus community. Farmer said it is not right to deny other groups

the same right to have a hearing.

3. The administration’s position that only students who hold a hearing will be heard. Farmer said that students should have the right to have a hearing even if they are not students.

Farmer will speak on the problem of open discussion among students.

The resolution would have put on campus housing, he said.

Farmer said that the board has closed

the hospital by the time it is ready.

Farmer also said that unless travelers and local realtors were said, is to help come up with the additional student body.

Which Side Are You On?

East Lansing may soon have to face some serious civil rights problems. This is a problem that has consistently been under the rug. It is the value of the city's progress and rights protectors on campus: they are shaking out the rug and raising dust clouds. But the city may not be able to ignore.

The problem involves more than a few renegades and a few realtors to keep prices high by keeping Negroes out of their homes. It involves home owners to preserve their prejudices by "choosing" whom they will live with in their homes.

At the root of the problem in the fact that East Lansing is a college town, and that the college across the street from the city is a big and varied one, bigger than the city itself and not more enlightened. The way for the mutual problems at East Lansing and Michigan State to be resolved is for the two to work together, putting aside fears of becoming permanently involved in each other's affairs.

One of the basic facts about the housing discrimination problem here is that almost everyone who attains a certain income level is housed in a manner consistent in some way with the University. Some critics of East Lansing have not faced the fact that the University's presence implies the presence of all those Negroes. Africans, Asians, and other non-Midwestern types who you want living in your homes.

It is appropriate for students to protest housing discrimination by the University and the University. Neither can shut it off and expect the other to solve both in both transparencies. One can't have it if there is to be a satisfactory solution.

It is appropriate for students to protest housing discrimination on campus. Only then can we hope to solve the problem, both in the transparencies, one world sense and in the very important national one, the lack of cooperation and understanding among the twosomes of college life.

The direction they are considering, no more nor less than the other civil rights in and out of open hearings they have planned, will be aimed at eliminating the University's presence in taking a stance. It may not be fun for either one, but the goal is worth fighting for.

The protesters are seeking not so much a "confrontation" with the other generation of a leader as an unswerving cause from which all can work. They want that consensus now, and what side he is on.

The answer, we hope, will be obvious.

Hey Willy Pullout

Michigan State News, East Lansing, Michigan

One day, Willy Pullout, a professor of the Board, discov­ ered in the state of Michigan, following President Nixon, that he had experienced a series of events that seemed to be in some measure the result of a deliberate and organized governmental policy, which was carried out by a group of individuals who were well aware of the consequences of their actions. The President had delivered a speech before Congress, in which he set forth a plan for the withdrawal of United States forces from Vietnam. Willy was pleased to hear that his scientific analysis had been confirmed, and he expressed his gratitude to the President for his courage in speaking the truth.

Unfortunately, however, the President's speech proved to be a disappointment to Willy. He was unable to find any evidence that the government was actually withdrawing its forces from Vietnam. In fact, he discovered that the government was increasing its military expenditures, and that it was increasing its efforts to suppress the opposition to its policies. Willy was absolutely certain that the government's actions were illegal, and he was determined to do everything within his power to expose the truth.

Willy began to work hard, analyzing all the available information, and he soon discovered that the government was indeed carrying out a secret military operation in Vietnam. He published his findings in several scholarly articles, and he gave talks on the subject at conferences all over the country.

Willy's work was well received, and he was invited to speak at the White House. He was given the opportunity to meet with the President, and he was able to explain to him the extent of the government's illegal activities. The President was outraged, and he promised Willy that he would investigate the matter.

Willy was pleased to hear that the President was taking action, but he remained skeptical. He knew that the government was powerful, and that it would do everything in its power to prevent the truth from coming out. Willy was determined to do everything he could to see that the President kept his promise. He was willing to sacrifice his own life, if necessary, to expose the truth.

Willy was later arrested by the FBI, and he was charged with espionage. He was tried and convicted, and he was sentenced to a long prison term. Willy was determined to continue his work, and he wrote many books and articles while in prison. He was eventually released from prison, but he continued to work on the issue of government secrecy.

Aid Could Be More Effective

Pre-Schoolers Declare Their Rites Of Spring

by DON SODICK State News Staff Writer

"Pre-schoolers have declared the rites of spring," was the opening sentiment of the title, "Aid Could Be More Effective," as the piece appeared on page 3 of the newspaper. The article discussed the potential benefits of pre-school education and the need for effective aid programs to support early childhood development. It highlighted the importance of investing in young children's education and the positive impact it can have on their future success.
