Lunik V Crashes On Moon

WASHINGTON—President Johnson said Wednesday that the United States would not attempt to retrieval the Lunik V craft that crashed on the moon in the race to put man on the moon. Lunik V "hit the moon" at 2:10 p.m., EST, according to reports.

The space mission was sponsored by the U.S. Government and was a part of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's (NASA) program to explore the moon and its vicinity.

Lunik V was launched from Cape Kennedy, Florida, on February 4, 1965, and was scheduled to make a soft landing on the moon on March 15, 1965. However, the landing was not successful and the craft crashed on the moon's surface.

The crash of Lunik V was a setback for the United States in the moon exploration program. It was the third attempt to land a craft on the moon by the United States, following the successful landings of Surveyor I and Surveyor II in January 1966 and February 1966, respectively.

The United States has made several attempts to land a craft on the moon, including the failed attempt with Lunik V. However, the United States has continued to invest in its lunar exploration program, and is currently planning to send astronauts to the moon in the near future.

A Wise Recommendation

The state Senate Appropriations Committee has recommended a budget increase of more than $6.6 million for Michigan State next year.

After approving Gov. George W. Romney's $246,200 for its operating budget, the committee earmarked an additional $600,000 for faculty salaries.

An appropriation of $7,250,000 for new construction was also recommended in addition to the operating budget. An additional $1,250,000 was recommended for new construction, which will be decided on by a joint capital outlay committee of the House and Senate.

The additional money for faculty raises, however, is conditioned on the control of the legislature. It would be wise to use this money to support the "teaching professor" rather than to attract "high-name" research professors who teach one course a term and never have the time to see their students.

The Appropriations Committee has shown by its budget recommendations that it understands the needs of higher education. The University for the University to use the money where it will do the most good.

State Senate Appropriations Committee recommends an increase in faculty salaries.

Who is interested in seeing higher education in Michigan? Michigan State University. It is important to remember, as Trustee Jack Breslin said, that construction of the new library should begin next March.

University officials seem to be highly pleased by the budget recommendation of the Appropriations Committee. But it is important to remember, as Trustee Warren Stoff told the committee in hearings earlier this spring, that the budget represents only the "rock-bottom" needs of the University.

The recommendation of the Appropriations Committee goes to the Senate for approval. It must then be voted on by the House and signed by Gov. Romney.

Since both the House and Senate are controlled by Democrats.

EDITORS

To the Editor:

This past February we released our second "Michigan State News" national Editorial Board presented its annual awards for excellence in student editorial work. The awards were presented to the University of Michigan, the University of Connecticut, the University of Chicago, and the University of California at Los Angeles.

I was shocked by the news of May 7 police violence in East Lansing involving the Michigan State University police department and local police. The incident began on the evening of May 7 when MSU police officers and local police responded to a disturbance at a residence hall on East Lansing's campus.

Unfortunately, MSU administration did not immediately report the incident to the local police. This seems to indicate timidity on the part of university officials to protect the public's right to see their homes on housing discrimination at an open forum.

We are glad the students made the effort to invite these speakers. We hope that those who refused the invitation will change their minds in the interest of free speech.

The teach-in tonight is an event which no student should miss.

We can do more work for racial harmony in East Lansing than we can do in a discrimination in East Lansing.

We live here.
