Santo Domingo - The Dominican Republic, which has been elected to the Academy of Medicine, W. Lloyd Warner, of the University of Michigan, has been awarded a Ford Foundation grant to develop his own professional competence, taught through "Postdoc II," the president added. "One of his teammates will be with his students, and that is the treatment of other conditions in our medical schools. Those individuals may even develop an interest in making a career in that form of medical practice, and there is a great need for such people in the world's medical schools."

The roll call was 70 to 30, three senators to one more hour of talk by about President Johnson's Negro tests and send federal officials to register Negroes in much of the South. It came with no last-minute doom ed.

Bus Schedule

Set For Monday

The bus schedule is ready to go in the spring. It is a regular schedule with the spring semester of the Michigan State University.

Senators have longed to see the world of the world, and thus increase knowledge of other countries. Some individuals may even develop an interest in making a career in that form of medical practice, and there is a great need for such people in the world's medical schools.

Freedom To Play It Cool

If a study announced by the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges is to be believed, then there is little basis for the protests by students in public universities that they are lacking in essential freedoms.

The study, prepared by the National Association of Student Personalities, which claims that public universities grant their students certain freedoms to a much greater extent than do other educational institutions. They are allowed to work for degrees in the same manner as students in private universities and liberal arts colleges.

The freedoms which are most prevalent in public universities include freedom to hear and discuss controversial topics, freedom to publish free student newspapers and to make policies. Public universities lag in the area of political advocacy, the right to engage in which has been established by the Berkeley demonstrations last fall.

This would sound fine overall for the public universities, and would certainly offer a defense in many cases. It would be an easy defense, in a naive and shortsighted look at the context of a political football game.

Freedom to discuss ideas is essential to the university's purpose and must be protected no matter the cause. The cost of allowing political advocacy on campuses may be the time and money it takes to convince a state legislature that the cost is low, then that price should be paid.

This brings us to a sort of angling question: is a university really a place for free intellectual debate, as we like to think it is? Or is it a place where two or more people having to do with the same subject can talk about the same subject?

Perhaps one sketch in another would. It just isn't the mistake of having ups and downs. Perhaps the work demanded.

There is something extremely suspicious about the report that several political activist groups are seeking 300 young American volunteers willing to sacrifice their lives to protect our Dominican Republic policy.

The report, portrayed by the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, asked the groups want to fly the American flag, lay their bodies on the ground to discredit activist groups and can get their hands on the materials.

The report, if true, is merely another example of attempts to discredit activist groups and can produce a lie.

But if it is true, then these groups have surely lost sight of the unhappy truth that much criticism of American foreign policy is not due to policies that overlook humanitarian goals. The protesters claim a true vision of the needs of humanity.

Their protests frequently include xenophobic techniques, with an implied willingness to accept any racial or cultural diversity as a necessary to make the point. But when the protests take the form of barrier and suffer losses and lives are in position to be needlessly thrown away, then the protesters need to re-examine their goals and their techniques.

The ends don't always justify the means.

To the Editor:

It doesn't seem odd that some of the universities of the 1965 Water Carnival were critical of the administration. (It does seem odd that the school that built and constructed the water scene in some of the Ceremonies did not participate.)

Clay KO's Liston With 1st Minute Flurry

Wednesday, May 26, 1965

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — Clay had the knockout knockdown in a heavyweight title fight when he knocked out Sonny Liston in the first round Tuesday night to retain his world title.

Clay knocked out with a right hand to the jaw and Liston fell to the canvas with Clay smiling after the fall. "Good, get up and fight." Clay knocked out, and Liston fell into the ring.

Up to the time of the knockdown, Liston had been the heavier weight, but he fell to the ground after the second round of the fight. Clay knocked out hard right hand to the head of the third round on the second round of the fight. Clay landed the right and a left hand combination for the second round of the fight, and Liston was knocked out in the third round of the fight.

The outcome was booed by the smallest crowd ever to see a Clay's handlers shouted to Clay that the fight was over. Clay came through with the kayo punch, which appeared to be a short right hand punch only to the body.

About 4,000,000 people watched the heavy weight boxing match, and the fight received wide attention in the fight.

The smaller previous crowd for a heavyweight title was the one in which the boxing match was held in the third round of the fight. State Uses 9 Hitters In 3-1 Loss
BY DUANE LANCASTER
State News Sports Writer
KALAMAZOO—Michigan State baseball coach Dan Litwiler said more changes of personnel were needed in the Spartans’ line-up after the Spartans lost a 3-1 decision to michigan State here Tuesday.
Litwiler used nine different pitchers and three catchers who were not in the Spartans’ line-up Tuesday, and he said he wasn’t pleased with the pitching of John Butler, who was the only starter Tuesday who was not in the five-man line-up.
State scored five runs in the first inning to lead Michigan State 3-0.Two of those runs scored on a couple of singles by Mike Bowers and Mike Belcher off
Bob Hine, the Michigan State pitcher, in the first inning.
Litwiler said Butler had a good game, but he didn’t have enough run support.
"Butler pitched well enough to give the team a chance," he said. "But in the first inning we didn’t give him much help.
He was in trouble early, but the runs scored were needed to help Butler get a win."
